Similarly, if we are following a development process, such as the Rational Unified Process, we'll want to model using boundary, control, and entity classes. This is where the real value of stereotypes comes in. When we stereotype an element such as node or a class, we are in effect extending the UML by creating a new building block just like an existing one but with its own special properties ( each stereotype may provide its own set of tagged values), semantics (each stereotype may provide its own constraints), and notation (each stereotype may provide its own icon).

In its simplest form, a stereotype is rendered as a name enclosed by gullemites (for ex, "name") and placed above the name of another element. As visual cue, we may define an icon for the stereotype and render that icon to the right of the name (if we are using
