

AMERICAN WALNUT

JUGLANS NIGRA (JUGLANDACEAE)

DESCRIPTION

The heartwood can be light grayish brown, dark chocolate or purplish black. The sapwood is whitish to yellowish brown, seldom stained or stained to match the heartwood. The slightly open grain is typically straight, but can be curly or wavy. The texture is usually coarse, but develops a lustrous patina in time. Burns (brufs), steampeened and刨削刨 produce notable markings, curly and wavy figures.

PROPERTIES

This hard, tough wood has moderate crushing and bending strength, low stiffness, and steam-bends well. It works well with machines and hand tools, with a moderate blunting effect. It generally planes well, but irregular grain can be tricky. It turns, carves, mortises, nails, screws, woods and paints well. Drying is satisfactory. It stains and polishes easily to a high finish.

SEASONING

The wood dries slowly and care must be taken to avoid degrade. This can include checking, iron staining, ring failures, heartrotting and collapse. There is a small movement in use.

DURABILITY

American walnut heartwood is highly durable, resistant to decay and to preservative treatment. The sapwood is permeable for treatment, and can be vulnerable to the powder post beetle.

TYPICAL USES

A prized cabinetmaking wood, it is also the chosen wood in the US for gunstocks and rifle butts. It is also used for quality furniture, architectural work, flooring, boatbuilding, musical instruments, turnery, carving, office furniture, kitchen cabinets, sporting goods and umbrella handles. It is dried for decorative veneers and is an important wood for making plywood. The tree also produces white nuts.

DESCRIPTION

The heartwood varies in colour, but is typically grayish brown with irregular dark streaks. The sapwood is paler and clearly distinct from the heartwood. European walnut is normally straight-grained, but can be wavy. It has a coarse texture. A closely defined central core will sometimes produce beautifully figured wood. Walnut cracks, burr (burr) and steampeened figures can be very attractive.

PROPERTIES

It has a high crushing strength, medium resistance to shock loads, medium bending strength, low stiffness, and very good steam-bending qualities. It works well with both machines and hand tools, and has a moderate blunting effect on cutting edges. The wood planes well and finishes cleanly. It turns, carves, nails, screws and sands well, and moulds, laves, steels, mortises and glues satisfactorily. Walnut stains very well, but ultraviolet light inhibitors in the finish are advised to prevent colour fade. The wood can be brought to an excellent polished finish.

EUROPEAN WALNUT

JUGLANS REGIA (JUGLANDACEAE)

SEASONING

The wood dries well but slowly. Heartrotting can occur in thicker stock if the drying is too fast. It exhibits medium movement in service.

DURABILITY

The heartwood has moderate durability, whereas the sapwood is vulnerable to attack from the common furniture and powder post beetles. The sapwood is permeable for preservative treatment, but the heartwood is resistant.

TYPICAL USES

Walnut is prized for cabinetwork and for gunstocks and rifle butts. It is used for quality furniture, office and book fittings, turnery, sports goods, carving, and similar trim in luxury cars. Figured wood is sliced into veneers for cabinetwork, marquetry and paneling. The tree also produces white nuts.
