description of The Concept of Law as an exercise in descriptive sociology contemporary legal theorists have been debating the relationship between legal theory and sociology and between legal theory and social science more generally There have been some who have insisted on a clear divide between legal theory and the social sciences citing fundamental methodological differences Others have attempted to bridge gaps revealing common challenges and similar objects of inquiry Collecting the work of authors such as Martin Krygier David Nelken Brian Tamanaha Lewis Kornhauser Gunther Teubner and Nicola Lacey this volume the second in a three volume series provides an overview of the major developments in the last thirty years The volume is divided into three sections each discussing an aspect of the relationship of legal theory and the social sciences 1 methodological disputes and collaboration 2 common problems especially as they concern different modes of explanation of social behaviour and 3 common objects including most prominently the study of language in its social context and normative pluralism

The Rule of Law Under Fire Raymond Wacks, 2026-02-19 A timely and important exploration of the ideological economic legal and institutional threats to the future of the rule of law      Introduction to Legal Theory John D. Finch,1974      Communication in Peace, Conflict in Communication Tuğrul İlter,2008 Peace and Conflict are commonly understood as polar opposites In a polarised opposition there is no place for conflict in peace and peace the privileged term of the binary opposition needs to be pure and homogeneous cleansed of any unlicensed differences and contradictions Yet a radically plural and democratic politic must harbour conflicting and antagonistic views of things opposition is internal to it and its view of freedom says that freedom is always the freedom of those who think differently In contrast the ideal of a homogeneous self same indivisibly unified society is totalitarian and repressive of the very differences that make a society any society possible The organizers of the 2nd International Conference on Communication and Media Studies at Eastern Mediterranean University 24 May 2007 thought that a deconstructive and feminist framework that destabilises the entrenched certain ties of polar oppositions and an ethical response to the irreducible otherness of the other as well as to one's own alterity would be very appropriate and relevant in our times for rethinking these issues and relied on that framework in formulating the theme of the conference as Communication in Peace Conflict in Communication to emphasise the interrelationship of the two parts separated by the slash as well as the formulation of the subtopics that were listed in the call for papers This volume includes work from around the world that responded to that call      American Book Publishing Record ,2003      Searching for Equality Laura Carlson,2007 Achieving economic equality between men and women is a challenge to every country The approach taken politically and legally in Sweden is to encourage a greater economic independence of women from the family through paid work as well encouraging men to assume a greater share of unpaid work particularly parental leave resulting in a lessening of the double burden of work for women These efforts have made within the context of the parameters of the Swedish model with respect to labor in which the preferred mechanism of resolution is agreement between the social partners and not legislation To this end the Swedish collective agreements have been analyzed specifically with respect to taking parental leave The other parameters in the area of sex equality applicable to the Swedish system are those as defined by Community law specifically the equal treatment and equal pay directives against which the Swedish regulations as well as case law applying such are assessed This work takes the Swedish approach to the problem of economic equality and compares it to the approaches as found in EU UK and US law In the UK there has been a recent emphasis on a family friendly workplace which is to be achieved at least in part through flexible working The American approach has focused on discriminatory behavior as a societal phenomena Comparisons to these two national systems are interesting also from an industrial relations aspect as Sweden is the most unionized at 80 % followed by the UK and then by the US at only 15 % The findings of this thesis suggest that Sweden may need to reassess its approach to equality between the sexes as well as issues of discrimination in general incorporating aspects of access to justice into the legal system as well as reassessing the role of the labor unions and the Swedish model with respect to such questions in general      Legal Theory Ian McLeod,2007 What is justice Is there a duty to obey a law even it is unjust This book tackles questions like these and explains some of the answers which legal theorists have given from ancient Greece to the present day
