Understanding Boundaries and Containment in Clinical Practice Rebecca Brown, Karen Stobart, 2018-03-29 The authors propose to investigate the meaning and purpose of boundaries within and around the therapeutic experience A boundary is more than a simple line delineating one space from another it is an entity with properties that demand a response if they are to be negotiated Boundaries circumscribe a space that can be viewed objectively or experienced subjectively as a container For the uninitiated this therapeutic container can be difficult to penetrate Even health professionals such as GPs and psychiatrists often do not know how to access psychotherapy organisations and their referral networks Also real constraints on the availability of counselling and psychotherapy within the National Health Service and the cost of private sector services may prohibit access to the help being sought The book explores aspects such as the gradual evolution of therapeutic boundaries in psychodynamic work boundary development in infancy and childhood the role of the therapist's mind and the therapeutic setting confidentiality and issues such as money and time

Perversion Fiona Ross,2018-04-17 Theoretical understanding of perversion is neglected in analytical psychology and narrowly developed in psychoanalysis where it traditionally refers to sexual perversion Etymological exploration of the word perversion including its use in religious moral sociological and legal contexts reveals a wider meaning than that adopted in psychoanalysis The aim of the author is to revise the psychoanalytic model through the introduction of Jungian concepts that extend the understanding of perversion beyond the bounds of sexuality to a more general relational context By describing the development of psychoanalytic thinking on perversion in detail the author is able to highlight the central differences between the Freudian and Jungian interpretive traditions and to explain why Jungian ideas on perversion have remained underdeveloped leading to the absence of a unique or available Jungian contribution to the theory of perversion
