Verbal Conditioning And Behavior:

Verbal Conditioning and Behaviour J. P. Das, 2014-05-17 Verbal Conditioning and Behavior clarifies certain major issues in the area of verbal behavior with emphasis on the problems that are continuous and those that are discontinuous with animal learning research This book provides information pertinent to certain areas of complex verbal behavior Organized into 10 chapters this book begins with an overview of conditioning as an objective tool for the investigation of verbal behavior This text then explains the relationship between the extent of verbal intervention and the degree of closeness of the conditioning task to a task of concept learning Other chapters consider the role of reinforcement in human learning needs This book discusses as well how meaning is acquired and how it can be transferred once acquired The final chapter deals with the individual differences in the development of a certain conditioned response This book is a valuable resource for psychologists college students teachers and researcher workers

Verbal Conditioning and Behaviour Jagannath Prasad Das, 1969

Posture and the Conditioning of Verbal Behavior Gerald Anthony Walker, 1976 A second study was conducted with 53 Introductory Psychology student interviewees who were paid volunteers The students were randomly assigned to either the attending or non attending condition The attending and non attending behaviors were consistent with those used in the first experiment The awareness questions were similar to those used by Taffel 1955 except for an item to monitor anxiety of the students and a second to monitor the student s feelings about the interviewer In an individual manner the students in both groups were verbally and visually presented an 80 item task similar to that used by Taffel 1955 The hypothesis that nonverbal attending cues potentiate the verbal reinforcer good in the verbal conditioning of Taffel items was not upheld in the present experiment The two experiments in this study suggest that certain attending behaviors do not significantly effect the power of verbal reinforcers to condition verbal behavior

Conditioning Verbal Behavior William E. Greable, 1971 The general purpose of this study was to investigate the influence of the operant conditioner's behavior during the baseline upon subsequent operant conditioning of opinion statements emitted by freshmen undergraduate students Specifically the study attempted to answer the following research questions Is it possible to systematically condition opinion statements in a verbal conditioning situation that resembles a counseling interview Does the behavior of the operant conditioner during the baseline have any influence on subsequent conditioning of opinion statements in a verbal conditioning situation resembling a counseling interview Is there a difference in the number of opinion statements emitted in a verbal conditioning situation resembling a counseling interview for males and females Is there any interaction between the baseline behavior of the operant conditioner the sex of the subject and the stage of treatment in the conditioning of opinion statements Subjects for the study were freshmen undergraduate students Two experiments were conducted in which each subject was seen individually twice in an interview setting Treatments were administered in an ABAB design with each stage lasting twenty five minutes All interviews were taped and listeners listened to the tapes and tabulated opinion and non opinion statements for each stage The operant conditioners recorded opinion statements as they occurred by pressing foot switches that activated counters in another room The correlation between the numbers of opinion statements tallied by the operant conditioners and the listeners was .98 in both experiments In experiment one a trained undergraduate operant conditioner administered four treatments to forty subjects There were five males and five females in each treatment condition Treatments one two and four consisted of continuous verbal reinforcement being administered for the emission of opinion statements during stages two and four For treatment one the baseline and return to baseline
