Language ,2007      Worlds of Written Discourse Vijay Kumar Bhatia,2004 Genre theory in the past few years has contributed immensely to our understanding of the way discourse is used in academic professional and institutional contexts However its development has been constrained by the nature and design of its applications which have invariably focused on language teaching and learning or communication training and consultation This has led to the use of simplified and idealised genres In contrast to this the real world of discourse is complex dynamic and unpredictable This tension between the real world of written discourse and its representation in applied genre based literature is the main theme of this book The book addresses this theme from the perspectives of four rather different worlds the world of reality the world of private intentions the world of analysis and the world of applications Using examples from a range of situations including advertising business academia economics law book introductions reports media and fundraising Bhatia uses discourse analysis to move genre theory away from educational contexts and into the real world Bloomsbury Publishing

The view that academic discourse is by definition impersonal has long been superseded. It seems unquestionable now that the interpersonal component of texts that is the ways in which the writers project themselves and their audience in the discourse is an essential factor determining the success of scholarly communication and has become a fundamental issue in the field of English for Academic Purposes (EAP). Interpersonality is the key issue around which the articles in this edited book focus on. The eighteen contributions included in this volume provide a wide exploratory view of the many academic genres in which interpersonal communication is manifested and the various analytical approaches from which the textual manifestation of that interpersonal communication can be studied. The varied origin of the contributors is also representative of the global interest that the issue of interpersonal communication arouses in the field of academic discourse analysis at an international level. The present volume constitutes a highly valuable tool for applied linguists and discourse analysts with an interest in EAP as well as for students, instructors and language teachers interested in academic discourse. The book may also be of interest to other agents intervening in the research publication process such as translators, proofreaders, reviewers and editors.
