The Safety Match Anton Pavlovich Chekhov, 2020-09-28 On the morning of October 6 1885 in the office of the Inspector of Police of the second division of S District there appeared a respectably dressed young man who announced that his master Marcus Ivanovitch Klausoff a retired officer of the Horse Guards separated from his wife had been murdered While making this announcement the young man was white and terribly agitated His hands trembled and his eyes were full of terror Whom have I the honor of addressing asked the inspector Psyekoff Lieutenant Klausoff s agent agriculturist and mechanician The inspector and his deputy on visiting the scene of the occurrence in company with Psyekoff found the following Near the wing in which Klausoff had lived was gathered a dense crowd The news of the murder had sped swift as lightning through the neighborhood and the peasantry thanks to the fact that the day was a holiday had hurried together from all the neighboring villages There was much commotion and talk Here and there pale tear stained faces were seen The door of Klausoff s bedroom was found locked The key was inside It is quite clear that the scoundrels got in by the window said Psyekoff as they examined the door They went to the garden into which the bedroom window opened The window looked dark and ominous It was covered by a faded green curtain One corner of the curtain was slightly turned up which made it possible to look into the bedroom Did any of you look into the window asked the inspector Certainly not your worship answered Ephraim the gardener a little gray haired old man who looked like a retired sergeant Who s going to look in if all their bones are shaking Ah Marcus Ivanovitch Marcus Ivanovitch sighed the inspector looking at the window I told you you would come to a bad end I told the dear man but he wouldn t listen Dissipation doesn t bring any good Thanks to Ephraim said Psyekoff but for him we would never have guessed He was the first to guess that something was wrong He comes to me this morning and says Why is the master so long getting up He hasn t left his bedroom for a whole week The moment he said that it was just as if some one had hit me with an ax The thought flashed through my mind We haven t had a sight of him since last Saturday and to day is Sunday Seven whole days not a doubt of it Ay poor fellow again sighed the inspector He was a clever fellow finely educated and kind hearted at that And in society nobody could touch him But he was a waster God rest his soul I was prepared for anything since he refused to live with Olga Petrovna Poor thing a good wife but a sharp tongue Stephen the inspector called to one of his deputies go over to my house this minute and send Andrew to the captain to lodge an information with him Tell him that Marcus Ivanovitch has been murdered And run over to the orderly why should he sit there kicking his heels Let him come here And go as fast as you can to the examining magistrate Nicholas Yermolaiyevitch Tell him to come over here Wait I ll write him a note The inspector posted sentinels around the wing wrote a letter to the examining magistrate and then went over to the director s for a glass of tea Ten minutes later he was sitting on a stool carefully nibbling a lump of sugar and swallowing the scalding tea There you are he was saying to Psyekoff there you are A noble by birth a rich man a favorite of the gods you may say as Pushkin has it and what did he come to He drank and dissipated and there you are he s murdered

After a couple of hours the examining magistrate drove up Nicholas Yermolaiyevitch Chubikoff for that was the magistrate's name was a tall fleshy old man of sixty who had been wrestling with the duties of his office for a quarter of a century Everybody in the district knew him as an honest man wise energetic and in love with his work He was accompanied to the scene of the murder by his inveterate companion fellow worker and secretary Dukovski a tall young fellow of twenty six
