Burkhart,1983 A textbook for introductory courses in forest measurement Emphasizes measuring timber but also describes measuring wood products and standing trees predicting the growth of both individual trees and stands and assessing range wildlife water and recreational resources Assumes only algebra and plane trigonometry though statistics and calculus would be helpful Revised from the 1983 edition based on suggestions from instructors Annotation copyright by Book News Inc Portland OR Forest Measurements Harold E. Burkhart,Thomas Eugene Avery,Bronson P. Bullock,2018-08-13 Harold Burkhart and Bronson Bullock have updated the quintessential introduction to forest measurements providing a new generation of forestry students at all levels with the concepts and methods they need for career success With attention to detail and clear precise language the authors present timber measurement techniques applicable to any tree inventory regardless of management objectives Assuming no more mathematical background than algebra and plane trigonometry the authors begin with basic statistical concepts to ensure that even introductory students benefit from the book s concise explanations Comprehensive coverage of sampling designs land measurements tree measurements forest inventory field methods and growth projections assures utility for foresters throughout their education and beyond The new edition includes expanded discussions of information technology and geospatial information systems commonly employed in assessing forest resources Recognizing the needs of contemporary forest inventories and models a new chapter on assessing forest carbon builds on the foundations of traditional forest measurements sampling and modeling Abundant photographs and illustrations highlight and clarify important concepts while many numerical examples allow readers to become comfortable with the quantitative tools employed by foresters

Forest Measurements Thomas Eugene Avery, Harold Burkhart, 2002 This text is intended for introductory courses in forest measurements Emphasis is on the measurement of timber with detailed coverage on measuring products cut from tree boles measuring attributes of standing trees inventorying volumes of forest stands and predicting growth of individual trees and stands of trees Background information on statistical methods sampling designs land measurements and use of aerial photographs is also provided An introduction to assessing range wildlife water and recreation resources associated with forested lands comprises the last chapter The measurement principles and techniques discussed apply to any inventory that includes assessment of the tree overstory regardless of whether the inventory is conducted for timber range wildlife watershed recreation or other management objectives

Forest Mensuration John A. Kershaw, Jr., Mark J. Ducey, Thomas W. Beers, Bertram Husch, 2016-11-01 Forest mensuration the science of measurement applied to forest vegetation and forest products holds value for basic ecology as well as sustainable forest management As demands on the world's forests have grown scientists and professionals are increasingly called on to quantify forest composition structure and the goods and services forests provide Grounded in geometry sampling theory and ecology as well as practical field experience forest mensuration offers opportunities for creative problem solving and critical thinking This fifth edition of the classic volume Forest Mensuration includes coverage of traditional and emerging topics with attention to SI and Imperial units throughout The book has been reorganised from the fourth edition to better integrate non timber and ecological aspects of forest mensuration at the tree stand forest and landscape scales throughout The new edition includes new chapters that specifically address the integration of remotely sensed data in the forest inventory process and inventory methods for dead and downed wood One unifying theme not only for traditional forestry but for the non timber inventory and for remote sensing is the use of covariates to make sampling more efficient and spatially explicit This is introduced in the introductory chapter on statistics and the chapter on sampling designs has been restructured to highlight this approach and lay the foundation for further learning New examples will be developed throughout the textbook with an emphasis on current issues and international practice Students in applied forestry programs will find ample coverage of forest products and timber inventory while expanded material on biodiversity biomass and carbon inventory downed dead wood and the growing role of remote sensing in forest assessment will be valuable to a broader audience in applied ecology

Forest Mensuration Anthonie van Laar, Alparslan Akça, 2007-07-20 Forest mensuration is one of the most fundamental disciplines within forest and related sciences It deals with the measurement of trees and stands and the analysis of the resultant information During the early days of sustained forest management simple measurement and estimation methods and with the analysis of inventory and research data were available The middle of last century however witnessed a worldwide increase in the need for more quantitative information about trees and stands This generated the need for more sophisticated methods to obtain and analyze forest data This development was followed by a phenomenal explosion of information During the past decades there has been fruitful cooperation between the Institute of Forest Inventory and Forest Growth formerly Institute of Forest Management and Forest Yield Sciences of the University of Gottingen Germany and the Faculty of Forestry of the University of Stellenbosch South Africa This book is one of the results of this fruitful cooperation between these institutions
