The two new boys in Heriot's house had been suitably entertained at his table and afterwards in his study with bound volumes of Punch. Incidentally they had been encouraged to talk with the result that one boy had talked too much while the other shut a stubborn mouth tighter than before. The babbling displayed an exuberant knowledge of contemporary cricket, a more conscious sense of humour and other little qualities which told their tale. He opened the door for Miss Heriot after dinner and even thanked her for the evening when it came to an end. His companion on the other hand, after brooding over Leech and Tenniel with a sombre eye, beat a boorish retreat without a word. Heriot saw the pair to the boys' part of the house. He was filling his pipe when he returned to the medley of books, papers, photographic appliances, foxes, masks, alpen stocks and venerable oak that made his study a little room in which it was difficult to sit down and impossible to lounge. His sister perched upon a coffin stool was busy mounting photographs at a worm-eaten bureau.
