Tree In Changing Light:

The Tree In Changing Light Roger McDonald, 2011-08-31 A beautiful and bestselling meditation on trees Because a tree bloomed seasonally we felt its body like our own A tree stood still and yet suffered change A tree growing old grew down into itself Trees could not heal wounds only cover them up Trees were magnificent survivors Trees got used Trees behaved erratically under stress Trees strove to fulfill an ideal shape but were twisted out of it by pressures of existence In The Tree In Changing Light Roger McDonald meditates on our unique landscape and its rich tapestry of native and introduced trees which give language to our existence His most intimate and personal book to date it also celebrates country men like his grandfather Chester Bucknall a forester and pine planter of whom he writes I believe him to have been a dreamer about trees Wilf Crane Roger McDonald's mentor with trees who flew planes across country on solo planting raids and whose death while flying inspired this book and Tom Wyatt a bush gardener whose dedicated hands made trees bloom in Queensland towns Here too are historical vignettes of a landscape husbanded for many centuries by Australian Aboriginals yet swiftly and irrevocably changed by European settlement encounters with poets and painters inspired by trees tales of ordinary people for whom trees are talismanic and interwoven throughout are autobiographical sketches slices of family history and episodes from Roger McDonald's own life as a writer and sometime planter of trees An unusual and beautiful book The Tree In Changing Light is the moving and personal statement of a writer about his relationship with the land with language with memory and with Australia's cultural and literary heritage

Advanced Automation for Tree Fruit Orchards and Vineyards Stavros G. Vougioukas, Qin Zhang, 2023-05-23 Modern tree fruit orchards and vineyards constitute complex production systems that are exposed to highly dynamic and stochastic natural financial and societal forces and face demands for increased production using fewer resources with reduced environmental impact Successful operation of orchards and vineyards under these conditions is practically impossible without careful and extensive use of state of the art automation technologies and careful planning of future operations e.g. training systems when replanting that can be enabled by knowledge of emerging technologies and future trends Also improvement of existing automation technologies and development of novel future systems cannot be accomplished without a working understanding of the tree and vine biological production systems their management needs and the capabilities and limitations of existing automation systems The book aims to provide the necessary knowledge to achieve the above goals in a way that can engage readers without engineering or horticultural backgrounds

Studying Tree Responses to Extreme Events Achim Bräuning, Andreas Bolte, Cristina Nabais, Sergio Rossi, Ute Sass-Klaassen, 2017-06-05 Trees are among the longest living organisms They are sensitive to extreme climatic events and document the effects of environmental changes in form of structural modifications of their tissues These modifications represent an integrated signal of complex biological responses enforced by the environment For example temporal change in stem increment integrates multiple information of tree performance and wood anatomical traits may be altered by climatic extremes or environmental stress Recent developments in preparative tools and computational image analysis enable to quantify changes in wood anatomical features like vessel density or vessel size Thus impacts on their functioning can be related to climatic forcing factors Similarly new developments in monitoring cambial phenology and mechanistic modelling are enlightening the interrelationships between environmental factors wood formation and tree performance and mortality Quantitative wood anatomy is a reliable indicator of drought occurrence during the growing season and therefore has been studied intensively in recent years The variability in wood anatomy not only alters the biological and hydraulic functioning of a tree but may also influence the technological properties of wood with substantial impacts in forestry On a larger scale alterations of sapwood and phloem area and their ratios to other functional traits provide measures to detect changes in a tree s life functions and increasing risk of drought induced mortality with possible impacts on hydrological processes and species composition of plant communities Genetic variability within and across populations is assumed to be crucial for species survival in an unpredictable future world The magnitude of genetic variation and heritability of adaptive traits might define the ability to adapt to climate change Is there a relation between genetic variability and resilience to climate change Is it possible to link genetic expression and climate change to obtain deeper knowledge of functional genetics To derive precise estimates of genetic determinism it is important to define adaptive traits in wood properties and on a whole tree scale Understanding the mechanisms ruling these processes is fundamental to assess the impact of extreme climate events on forest ecosystems and to provide realistic scenarios of tree responses to changing climates Wood is also a major carbon sink with a long term residence impacting the global carbon cycle How well do we understand the link between wood growth dynamics wood carbon allocation and the global carbon cycle Papers contribution to this Research Topic will cover a wide range of ecosystems However special relevance will be given to Mediterranean type areas These involve coastal regions of four continents making Mediterranean type ecosystems extremely interesting for investigating the potential impacts of global change on growth and for studying responses of woody plants under extreme environmental conditions For example the ongoing trend towards warmer temperatures and reduced precipitation can increase the susceptibility to fire and pests The EU funded COST Action STREeSS Studying Tree Responses to extreme Events a SynthesiS addresses such crucial tree biological and forest ecological issues by providing a collection of important methodological and scientific insights about the current state of knowledge and by opinions for future research needs
