International Handbook of Internet Research Jeremy Hunsinger, Lisbeth Klastrup, Matthew Allen, 2010-06-17 Internet research spans many disciplines From the computer or information sciences through engineering and to social sciences humanities and the arts almost all of our disciplines have made contributions to internet research whether in the effort to understand the effect of the internet on their area of study or to investigate the social and political changes related to the internet or to design and develop software and hardware for the network The possibility and extent of contributions of internet research vary across disciplines as do the purposes methods and outcomes Even the epistemological underpinnings differ widely The internet then does not have a discipline of study for itself It is a field for research Baym 2005 an open environment that simultaneously supports many approaches and techniques not otherwise commensurable with each other There are of course some inhibitions that limit explorations in this field research ethics disciplinary conventions local and national norms customs laws borders and so on Yet these limits on the internet as a field for research have not prevented the rapid expansion and exploration of the internet After nearly two decades of research and scholarship the limits are a positive contribution providing bases for discussion and interrogation of the contexts of our research making internet research better for all These limits challenges that constrain the theoretically limitless space for internet research create boundaries that give definition to the field and provide us with a particular topography that enables research and investigation

Food Webs and Biodiversity Axel G. Rossberg, 2013-06-03 Food webs have now been addressed in empirical and theoretical research for more than 50 years Yet even elementary foundational issues are still hotly debated One difficulty is that a multitude of processes need to be taken into account to understand the patterns found empirically in the structure of food webs and communities Food Webs and Biodiversity develops a fresh comprehensive perspective on food webs Mechanistic explanations for several known macroecological patterns are derived from a few fundamental concepts which are quantitatively linked to field observables An argument is developed that food webs will often be the key to understanding patterns of biodiversity at community level Key Features Predicts generic characteristics of ecological communities in invasion extirpation equilibrium Generalizes the theory of competition to food webs with arbitrary topologies Presents a new testable quantitative theory for the mechanisms determining species richness in food webs and other new results Written by an internationally respected expert in the field With global warming and other pressures on ecosystems rising understanding and protecting biodiversity is a cause of international concern This highly topical book will be of interest to a wide ranging audience including not only graduate students and practitioners in community and conservation ecology but also the complex systems research community as well as mathematicians and physicists interested in the theory of networks This is a comprehensive work outlining a large array of very novel and potentially game changing ideas in food web ecology Ken Haste Andersen Technical University of Denmark I believe that this will be a landmark book in community ecology it presents a well established and consistent mathematical theory of food webs It is testable in many ways and the author finds remarkable agreements between predictions and reality G za Mesz na E tv s University Budapest
