Social Interaction Michael Argyle, Handbook of Social Interactions in the 21st Century Anne T. Heatherton, Vivian

A. Walcott, 2009 Social interaction is a dynamic changing sequence of social actions between individuals or groups who modify their actions and reactions according to those of their interaction partners. In other words they are events in which people attach meaning to a situation, interpret what others are meaning and respond accordingly. Social interactions can be differentiated into Accidental, also known as social contact, not planned and likely not repeated. For example asking a stranger for directions or shopkeeper for product availability. Repeated, not planned, bound to happen from time to time. For example accidentally meeting a neighbour when walking on your street. Regular, not planned but very common, likely to raise questions when missed. Meeting a doorman or a security guard every workday in your workplace, dining every day in the same restaurant etc. Regulated, planned and regulated by customs or law, will definitely raise questions when missed. Interaction in a workplace, coming to work, staff meetings, playing a game etc. family etc. In sociological hierarchy social interaction is more advanced than behaviour, action, social behaviour, social action and social contact and is in turn followed by more advanced concept of social relation. In other words social interactions which consist of social actions form the basis for social relations. This handbook presents the latest international research in the field.

Multiactivity in Social Interaction Pentti Haddington, Tiina Keisanen, Lorenza Mondada, Maurice Nevile, 2014-09-15

Doing more than one thing at the same time, a phenomenon that is often called multitasking, is characteristic to many situations in everyday and professional life. Although we all experience it, its real-time features remain understudied. Multiactivity in Social Interaction: Beyond multitasking offers a fresh view to the phenomenon by presenting studies that explore how two or more activities can be related and made co-relevant as people interact with one another. The studies build on the basis that multiactivity is a social, verbal and embodied phenomenon. They investigate multiactivity by using video recordings of real-life interactions from a range of different contexts such as medical settings, office workplaces and car driving. With the companion collection Interacting with Objects: Language, materiality and social activity, the book advances understanding of the complex organisation and accomplishment of social interaction, especially the significance of embodiment, materiality, participation and temporality. A close appreciation of how people use language and interact for and during multiactivity will not only interest researchers in language and social interaction, communication studies and
