Women And Learning In English Writing

Rosemary Cullen Owens

Women And Learning In English Writing:

Women and Learning in English Writing, 1600-1900 Deirdre Raftery, 1997 This book documents and analyzes an aspect of social change in England the opening of higher education to women Because college education for women developed in the second half of the nineteenth century the opening of higher education to women has been viewed as an unexpected revolution This book challenges such all assumption by indicating that the education of women had been the subject of debate and serious discussion at least since the Renaissance and it illustrates how print culture brought the debate into the public domain and contributed to the eventual opening of higher education to women The publications examined in this study indicate that formal higher education for women had been anticipated by a significant number of seventeenth eighteenth and early nineteenth century writers whose works are here contextualised for the first time While the focus of this study has been on printed sources attention has also been paid to the personal papers of individuals who directly influenced the eventual opening of university education to women and who illustrated that the success of the struggle for women s education was due to the ability of a few individuals to realise ambitions which had been held for generations

Women Writing the Academy Gesa Kirsch, 1993-10-28 Women Writing the Academy is based on an extensive interview study by Gesa E Kirsch that investigates how women in different academic disciplines perceive and describe their experiences as writers in the university Kirsch s study focuses on the writing strategies of successful women writers their ways of establishing authority and the kinds of audiences they address in different disciplinary settings Based on multiple interviews with thirty five women from five different disciplines anthropology education history nursing and psychology and four academic ranks seniors graduate students and faculty before and after tenure this is the first book to systematically explore the academic context in which women write and publish While there are many studies in literary criticism on women as writers of fiction there has not been parallel scholarship on women as writers of professional discourse be it inside or outside the academy Through her research for example Kirsch found that women were less likely than their male counterparts to think of their work as sufficiently significant to write up and submit for publication tended to hold on to their work longer than men before sending it out and were less likely than men to revise and resubmit manuscripts that had been initially rejected This book is significant in that it investigates a new area of research gender and writing and in doing so brings together findings on audience authority and gender

Female Education in Ireland 1700-1900 Deirdre Raftery, Susan M. Parkes, 2007 The history of formal education for Irish women was characterised by a dichotomy should a girl be educated for the private sphere and a dutiful subservience or should she be educated for independent thought and paid employment Her role models were either women who like Minerva the goddess of wisdom valued intellectual pursuits or women who like the Madonna were pious and dutiful and accepted that their primary role was motherhood This book is the only complete study of the formal education of Irish women and girls Based on extensive research in original sources it presents a fascinating social history of the educational experience of the female gender in Ireland between 1700 and 1920 The book which examines its theme in three major sections covers every aspect of formal and indeed informal schooling and tuition Consequently the reader is introduced to such areas as private education orphanages industrial schools national schools convents intermediate schools and colleges of higher education Section One examines the history of education prior to the intervention of the state Sources include records of private education charity schools and foundations of the early Catholic teaching orders Section Two examines state intervention The introduction of the national school system brought mass literacy to girls of the lower classes but with a gendered curriculum At convent and boarding schools middle class girls received an education suited to their roles in life However in the mid nineteenth century we find the genesis of the concept of academic education for girls Finally Section Three deals with the intellectual liberation of women with particular reference to state support for Intermediate education from 1878 and the campaign for access to higher education for women Formal education brought with it an opening of the professions and facilitated access to a range of paid employment for women

A Social History of Women in Ireland, 1870-1970 Rosemary Cullen Owens, 2005 A Social History of Women in Ireland explores the role and status of women in Ireland from 1870 until 1970 and fills an important gap in the literature of the period touching as it does on politics sociology marriage patterns religion education and work Resources in Education, 1990-04

Learning Environments for Women's Adult Development Kathleen Taylor, Catherine Marienau, 1995-05-11 This volume of New Directions for Adult and Continuing Education explores emerging theory and practice in adult development adult learning and feminist pedagogy for learning environments designed to meet women's needs Adult women learners face special challenges as they enter or reenter higher education Research and experience suggest that historical and current education approaches may not serve men and women equally The central aim of this book is to help make learning environments more supportive of reentry women in their ongoing development Many of the practices showcased in this sourcebook emerged from programs of alternative higher education as they endeavored to meet the needs of an increasingly diverse population of learners The different pedagogical approaches described herein help a woman learner shape the narrative of her evolving self in multiple life contexts Ultimately the kinds of educational practices described in this volume will prove effective in promoting lifelong learning and development for both women and men This is the 65th issue in the journal series New Directions for Adult and Continuing Education For more information on the series please see the Journals and Periodicals page
