Workflows for e-Science Ian J. Taylor, Ewa Deelman, Dennis B. Gannon, Matthew Shields, 2007-12-31 This collection of articles on Work ows for e Science is very timely and portant Increasingly to attack the next generation of scienti c problems multidisciplinary and distributed teams of scientists need to collaborate to make progress on these new Grand Challenges Scientists now need to access and exploit computational resources and databases that are geographically distributed through the use of high speed networks

Virtual Organizations or VOs must be established that span multiple administrative domains and or institutions and which can provide appropriate authentication and authorization services and access controls to collaborating members Some of these VOs may only have a fleeting existence but the lifetime of others may run into many years The Grid community is attempting to develop both standards and middleware to enable both scientists and industry to build such VOs routinely and robustly This of course has been the goal of research in distributed computing for many years but now these technologies come with a new twist service orientation By specifying resources in terms of a service description rather than allowing direct access to the resources the IT industry believes that such an approach results in the construction of more robust distributed systems The industry has therefore united around web services as the standard technology to implement such service oriented architectures and to ensure interoperability between different vendor systems
