Soviet Heavy Interceptors:

Soviet Heavy Interceptors Yefim Gordon,2004 In the nervous 1950s the Soviet Union faced the task of defending its borders against intrusions by Western spyplanes and deterring an attack by Western bomber armadas The mission was to intercept incoming adversaries at long range which required plenty of engine power ample fuel and heavy armament Several Soviet design bureaus took on this priority task The first heavy interceptor from the Mikoyan stable was the swept wing I 3 of 1956 which though never flown was the precursor of the cannon armed I 7U and the missile armed I 75 These were followed by the delta winged Ye 150 series of the late 1950s and early 1960s the single engined Ye 150 and Ye 152 and the twin engined Ye 152A Known to the outside world as the Ye 166 the huge Ye 152M set an impressive speed record of 2 681 km h on 7th July 1962 These aircraft paved the way for the MiG 25 interceptor Other contenders included the Sukhoi T 37 terminated by government order before it had a chance to fly Even the Tupolev OKB traditionally specializing in heavy bombers and airliners developed the twin engined Tu 128 the world s largest interceptor which was so huge that it was initially mistaken for a medium bomber

The Fire of the Gods: Oppenheimer's Legacy - The Evolutionary History of Nuclear Age - Part 3 - 1970-1980 Rajat Narang,2024-01-23 The Book 3 of the series based on recently declassified documents by the CIA U S State Department KGB after the end of Cold War and other international agencies takes off at the onset of the 1970s decade when after having developed deployed hundreds of ICBMs SLBMs armed to the teeth with megaton class thermonuclear warheads both the U S as well as the U S S R were faced with the urgent need to invest billions of dollars once again towards the development of Anti Ballistic Missile ABM Systems to protect themselves against the ICBMs The Soviets incredibly had deployed around 1 000 heavy ICBMs hosting a massive insane 6 000 megatons worth of thermonuclear warheads collectively posing a grave danger to the U S homeland as well as NATO allies while the U S had a clear overmatch in Heavy Bombers and SLBMs over the Soviets The cost of development of a comprehensive ABM System to secure the entire U S had been pegged at 40 billion in the mid 1960s equivalent of almost 400 billion today which still would have sparked another arms race between them Both the superpowers however chose to instead negotiate to mutually limit the scope of the threat and shake hands which paved the way for détente and arms control agreements under SALT I in 1972 a groundbreaking event followed by the Helsinki Accords in 1975 which briefly altered the course of the Cold War

Air Corps News Letter ,1969 Air Force and Space Digest ,1970-07 Antonov Jet Twins E. Gordon,Yefim Gordon,Dmitriï Komissarov,2005 The need to provide a state of the art jet successor to the ubiquitous An 26 led Antonov to develop a twin turbo fan tactical airlifter the An 72 which made use of the Coanda effect improving wing lift and field performance dramatically The prototype flew in 1977 but it was not until the mid 1980s that production began in Khar kov The baseline military airlifter soon spawned a wide selection of derivatives First was the An 74 originally conceived as a specialized version for Arctic and Antarctic support it entered production as an ordinary civil transport Concerted efforts by the Antonov OKB to enhance the capabilities of the An 72 An 74 family led to the development of the An 72P armed border patrol version the convertible cargo passenger An 747T and An 74TK the An 74S flying hospital and the radically redesigned An 74TK 300 with engines on underwing pylons an arrangement which improved the all important economic efficiency The most intriguing An 72 derivative was the unorthodox An 71 AEW aircraft originally meant for shipboard operations it was prevented from entering production by the political and economic situation

Sukhoi Interceptors Yefim Gordon, Dmitriy Komissarov, 2020-01-28 The first twenty years of Sukhoi supersonic interceptor development including the Su 15 a symbol of the Cold War and true guardian of the Soviet skies Closed in 1949 the Sukhoi Design Bureau was reborn in 1953 to meet an urgent demand for a fast interceptor that would counter the threat posed by NATO bombers It wasted no time developing a succession of missile armed Mach 2 interceptors characterized by delta wings the single engined Su 9 entered service in 1960 followed by the up armed Su 11 in 1964 and the twin engined Su 15 in 1967 Though built in modest numbers the three types became an important asset for the Soviet air defense force particularly the more capable Su 15 which unfortunately became notorious for shooting down two intruding South Korean airliners within five years The Su 15 outlasted the Soviet Union the last being retired in 1996 There were also several Sukhoi interceptors that remained in prototype or project form All known versions are described as are operational details The book features many rare and previously unpublished photos

Soviet Secret Projects Tony Buttler, Yefim Gordon, 2004 Among the best selling aviation titles of recent years have been Midland's Lutwaffe and British Secret Projects series Soviet secret projects now come under the spotlight This first volume covers bomber concepts from the various design bureaus from the 1940s onwards Many unusual and sophisticated aircraft are featured in these pages allowing comparisons between what the Soviets were working on and what was being produced in the West during that period

Congress, 1980 Daedalus ,1980 U.S. Unilateral Arms Control Initiatives William Rose, 1988-12-05 As a former negotiator I wish I had had the benefit of Professor Rose's insights and I am confident that future U S negotiators will profit from them Paul C Warnke Former Director U S Arms Control and Disarmament Agency The first systematic appraisal of the utility of unilateral initiatives in arms control this study combines theory and case studies to provide important insights and implications for U S policy Graham H Stuart Professor of International Relations Stanford University I consider Dr Rose s book to be a very significant contribution to the field The topic unilateral arms control initiatives is one that has drawn sporadic attention in the past but I know of no better analysis of this important topic than Dr Rose s Dan Caldwell Pepperdine University The question has been continuously debated since the 1950s Should unilateral arms control initiatives be treated as essential steps toward world peace or as the product of wishful thinking that is in fact dangerous to our national security Rose explores the problem through an analysis of Soviet responses to past American initiatives where the U S exercised restraint in weapons testing production or deployment in attempts to obtain reciprocal Soviet restraint In comparative case studies of six U S arms initiatives some of which succeeded and some of which failed he tests and evaluates a series of hypotheses about the conditions that may favor the success of such initiatives After outlining the major features of the arms control controversy Rose surveys the theoretical literature to identify factors that may favor successful initiatives These include aspects of the bargaining process cost benefit calculations about the military political and economic consequences of reciprocating an initiative and other elements in the domestic and international environment that may effect the outcome of bargaining The factors that are influenced by the domestic nature or international situation of the Soviet Union are examined in detail
