Reno,2020-08-19 This book questions when exactly the Anthropocene began uncovering an early Anthropocene in the literature art and science of eighteenth and nineteenth century Britain In chapters organized around the classical elements of Earth Fire Water and Air Seth Reno shows how literary writers of the Industrial Era borrowed from scientists to capture the changes they witnessed to weather climate and other systems Poets linked the hellish flames of industrial furnaces to the magnificent geophysical force of volcanic explosions Novelists and painters depicted cloud formations and polluted urban atmospheres as part of the emerging discipline of climate science In so doing the subjects of Reno s study some famous some more obscure gave form to a growing sense of humans as geophysical agents capable of reshaping Earth itself Situated at the interaction of literary studies environmental studies and science studies Early Anthropocene Literature in Britain tells the story of how writers heralded and wrestled with Britain's role in sparking the now familiar epoch of humans The Golden Age Ian Inkster, Colin Griffin, Judith Rowbotham, 2017-07-05 In 1850 the Industrial Revolution came to an end In 1851 the Great Exhibition illustrated to the whole world the supremacy of industrial England For the next twenty years Britain reigned supreme From around 1870 Britain began to decline Britain is now a second rate power with strong memories of its former supremacy The above five sentences summarise a common view of the sequencing of Britain's rise and relative fall a stereotype that is challenged and modified in the essays of The Golden Age By concentrating on central aspects of social and industrial change authors expose the underpinnings of supremacy its unsung underside its tarnished gold Major themes cover industrial and technological change social institutions and gender relations in a period during which industry and industrialism were equally celebrated and nurtured Against this background it is difficult to argue for any sudden decline of energy assets or institution nor for any significant move from an industrial society to one in which a hearty manufacturing was replaced by commerce and land sensibility and artifice More Than Mere Amusement Catriona M. Parratt, 2001 This groundbreaking study surveys how working class women restricted by gender time and financial means as well as cultural and social tensions managed to find spheres of leisure and recreation The Penniless Press, Tennyson Research Bulletin, 1994 Factory Girl H. Gustav Klaus, 1998 It is at last being recognized that contrary to common understanding there were working class women poets in the nineteenth century Yet this growing awareness is rarely accompanied by a sustained engagement with their poetry Painstaking research into the life and work of an author remains constricted to the Brownings and Rossettis of both sexes The present study breaks with this academic habit It is the first critical biography of the Glaswegian writer who signed her poems as The Factory Girl It is an essay in recovery and exploration situating Ellen Johnston at the intersection of gender class and nation It documents her range of subjects styles and voices The book is concluded by a selection of Ellen Johnston's verse Transactions of the Lancashire and Cheshire Antiquarian Society Lancashire and Cheshire Antiquarian Society, 1995 Includes the Society's proceedings and list of members 1848, the Year the World Turned? Kay Boardman, Christine Kinealy, 2007 As Terry Eagleton suggests in his Foreword the year 1848 has taken on a historical significance not to mention a mythical quality which few other dates have attained Yet according to some scholars it was a year in which the world failed to turn Or did it No history of 1848 can avoid looking at the significance and ramifications of the revolutions in France Italy Germany and Hungary but this publication also gives consideration to places and perspectives that have traditionally been given little attention such as Spain Russia Finland Ireland Britain and Australia It also looks at groups who are sometimes invisible in the main narratives Irish Protestants Austrian Jews and the Specials TM in England Additionally it asks what were the longer term repercussions of these events throughout the century and throughout the world While political and social upheaval was important other significant changes were taking place The social and economic discontent that triggered the various uprisings combined with an intellectual ferment that found an outlet in literature and other forms of creative expression Writers artists and commentators were as attracted as they were repelled by the events of 1848 by the sense of living at a particular time consequently a number of chapters focus on poetry fiction periodicals and visual material associated with this year From a gender perspective 1848 offers some interesting findings A number of chapters focus on women TM s views and experiences of the Year of Revolution and not surprisingly they suggest a range of viewpoints Attention is also given to Ireland especially the key role that women played in the emergence of cultural nationalism The central theme of this collection is did the world turn as a result of the revolutions of 1848 If so in what ways but if not why not To answer these and other questions this publication brings together new research from a wide range of scholars including those of international renown to newer voices from a wide variety of disciplines all applying a diverse array of methods and approaches By combining a broad approach to the period in question in terms of disciplines methodologies and new syntheses unexpected insights are offered into a familiar setting It thus provides a unique insight into this year in both international and interdisciplinary terms
