Science of Trapping Elmer Harry Krebs, 2016-09-16 Among the many outdoor occupations trapping the furbearing animals is perhaps the most pleasant and in many instances is also very profitable Although trapping was one of the earliest industries of this country the occupation has not passed away along with the vanishing wilderness for there is more trapping done today than at any time during the past Scattered all over North America in both the thickly settled portions and the more remote districts are thousands of trappers who are each season deriving both pleasure and profit from this unique calling weight of the butt will not only lift the trap but the captured animal as well It is fastened down in the same way as the spring pole and is released by the struggles of the animal In order to keep steel traps in perfect working order they should have a certain amount of attention Repairs will be necessary at times and before the trapping season commences one should look them all over and see that they are in good condition The triggers should be so adjusted that the pan will set level All parts should work freely and the trap should neither spring too easily nor too hard Rust on traps is not desirable and may be prevented to a great extent by boiling the traps occasionally in a solution of evergreen boughs maple willow or oak bark or walnut hulls This will give the traps a blue black color and they will not rust for a considerable length of time
