This study attempts to gain information concerning the receptive as opposed to the creative aesthetic experience by talking to museum professionals who spend their working lives identifying, appraising, and explicating works of art The study is based on an underlying assumption that rules and practices for looking at art exist and must be mastered if success is to ensue The anthropological research approach uses semi structured interviews and subjects the responses to systematic analysis Major conclusions emphasize the unity and diversity of the aesthetic experience The structure of the aesthetic experience is found to be an intense involvement of attention in response to a visual stimulus for no other reason than to sustain the interaction The experiential consequences of such a deep and autotelic involvement are an intense enjoyment characterized by feelings of personal wholeness a sense of discovery and a sense of human connectedness The aesthetic content requires two sets of preconditions that make the experience possible the challenges contained in the object and the skills of the viewer While the structure of the aesthetic experience is rated similar in terms by all the respondents the challenges or content stimuli that triggers the experience vary considerably These challenges of art are the formal structure of the work its emotional impact the intellectual references it carries and the opportunities it creates for a dialogue among the artist his time and the viewer Without this content challenge there would be nothing to arrest the viewer and consequently no experience Level of skill is critical Challenges and skill must be nearly in balance for the attention to become focused A complex work of art will engage only a person who has developed complex visual skills The book is divided into six chapters and concludes with appendices Interview Questions for Museum Professionals and Aesthetic Experience Questionnaire Form Contains approximately 100 references MM
