Communication and Group Decision Making Randy Y. Hirokawa, Marshall Scott Poole, 1996-07-09 The long awaited second edition of Communication and Group Decision Making advances a unique perspective on group decisionmaking complementing approaches taken in management psychology and sociology Group communication processes are extremely important yet they have proven to be elusive and difficult to understand and the type of theory necessary to make sense of the processes differs from those commonly found in the social sciences This exceptional book gathers together and discusses a number of strong theoretical frameworks that have developed over the past 15 years Providing important empirical evidence the authors take stock of recent developments in group communication research The essays are distinctive both in their explicit focus on communication processes and in their location in a unique intellectual tradition      Catalog of

The book is divided into four parts Each part is devoted to an important area of communication study and research that Elwood Murray helped integrate into speech and communication curricula Communication Methodology Group Communication Linguistics and Communication Disorders The introductions to each section provide the reader with an overview of the specialty and acquaint him with the material to follow They are written for the student who is just beginning his studies in speech and communication The readings in each of the four sections vary considerably in focus level and content Some are highly general and theoretical others are rather specific and more data oriented Some consist of a broad review of the literature while others deal with a very narrow aspect of some problem The topics are treated with enough rigor to satisfy the specialist and collectively they cover sufficient ground to meet the needs of the novice or generalist for a look at some of the major and minor interest areas in speech and communication      The Effects of Prior Experience, Learning Approach, and Demographics on Speech Communication Apprehension Michelle J.
