The Making of Human Concepts Denis Mareschal,Paul C. Quinn,S. E. G. Lea,2010

Human adults appear different from other animals in their ability to form abstract mental representations that go beyond perceptual similarity In short they can conceptualize the world This apparent uniqueness leads to an immediate puzzle WHEN and HOW does this abstract system come into being To answer this question we need to explore the origins of adult concepts both developmentally and phylogenetically When does the developing child acquire the ability to use abstract concepts Does the transition occur around 2 years with the onset of symbolic representation and language Or is it independent of the emergence of language When in evolutionary history did an abstract representational system emerge Is there something unique about the human brain How would a computational system operating on the basis of perceptual associations develop into a system operating on the basis of abstract relations Is this ability present in other species but masked by their inability to verbalise abstractions Perhaps the very notion of concepts is empty and should be done away with altogether This book tackles the age old puzzle of what might be unique about human concepts Intuitively we have a sense that our thoughts are somehow different from those of animals and young children such as infants Yet if true this raises the question of where and how this uniqueness arises What are the factors that have played out during the life course of the individual and over the evolution of humans that have contributed to the emergence of this apparently unique ability This volume brings together a collection of world specialists who have grappled with these questions from different perspectives to try to resolve the issue It includes contributions from leading psychologists neuroscientists child and infant specialists and animal cognition specialists Taken together this story leads to the idea that there is no unique ingredient in the emergence of human concepts but rather a powerful and potentially unique mix of biological abilities and personal and social history that has led to where the human mind now stands A must read for students and researchers in the cognitive sciences

Learning and Behavior James E. Mazur,2015-07-17

This book reviews how people and animals learn and how their behaviors are later changed as a result of this learning Nearly all of our behaviors are influenced by prior learning experiences in some way This book describes some of the most important principles theories controversies and experiments that pertain to learning and behavior that are applicable to many different species and many different learning situations Many real world examples and analogies make the concepts and theories more concrete and relevant to the students In addition most of the chapters include sections that describe how the theories and principles have been used in the applied field of behavior modification Each chapter in the seventh edition was updated with new studies and new references that reflect recent developments in the field The book includes a number of learning aids for students including a list of learning objectives at the beginning of each chapter practices quizzes and review questions and a glossary for all important terms Learning Behavior covers topics such as classical and operant conditioning reinforcement schedules avoidance and punishment stimulus control comparative cognition observational learning motor skill learning and choice Both the classic studies and the most recent developments and trends in the field are explored Although the behavioral approach is emphasized many cognitive theories are covered as well along with a chapter on comparative cognition Upon completing this book readers will be able to understand the field of learning and discuss real world applications of learning principles
