The Torn Identity:

Narratives of Loss and Longing Nukhbah Taj Langah, Roshni Sengupta, 2024-12-23 This volume brings together new research on the developing and transforming literary scene in South Asia in the aftermath of the partitions of 1947 and 1971. It thematically explores the transformations that have taken place in the literary spheres of India, Pakistan, and Bangladesh since violence and irresolvable conflicts wreaked the subcontinent through the narratives of loss and longing. The volume deals with key themes such as feminism, minorities, and marginality, vernacular history, Bengali literary representations, and post-Partition artistic and literary representations. It contributes towards fostering a network for academic exchange across the borders, thereby presenting diverse and in-depth studies on a plethora of subjects within the larger framework of literary landscapes. Narratives of Loss and Longing will be of interest to scholars of literary studies, postcolonial and decolonial studies, partition studies, minority studies, refugee studies, gender and women's studies, and those interested in South Asia, especially India, Pakistan, and Bangladesh.

The Ethnic Penalty Reza Hasmath, 2016-03-23 Populations of visible ethnic minorities have steadily increased over the past few decades in immigrant-receptive societies. While a complex calculus of push and pull factors has motivated this increase, one of the main impetuses for this migration has been the search for employment, better wages, and a higher standard of living. It is therefore not surprising that the educational attainments of the first generation and beyond have achieved convergence with or exceeded the non-ethnic minority cohort. These outcomes may suggest a greater propensity for visible ethnic minorities to attain labour market success and to fully integrate within the community. However, the narrative derived from statistical analysis, interviews, and participant observation suggests an uneasiness to boldly claim this as the most convincing conclusion at this juncture. The Ethnic Penalty argues that a penalty has impeded the occupational success of ethnic minorities during the job search, hiring, and promotion process. As a result, ethnic minorities have a lower income, higher unemployment, and a general failure to convert their high educational attainments into comparable occupational outcomes. In this context, the book examines whether explanatory factors such as discrimination, an individual's social network, a firm's working culture, and a community's social trust are major contributing reasons behind this apparent penalty, whilst also making suggestions for improving the integration, education, delivery, and labour market outcomes of visible ethnic minorities.

Overcoming the World Yevgeny Ustinovich, 2024-04-04 From the first century to the twenty-first, Christians have never been immune to persecution, displacement, or trauma. However, by following Jesus's example in the Gospel of John and rooting themselves in their identity as children of God, they can experience God's power to transform shame into glory. In the Gospel of John, Jesus experiences extreme forms of humiliation, rejection, and suffering. Yet, in sharp contrast to those around him, he seeks and sees God's glory in everything he does, and everything that is done to him. Beginning with this reality, Yevgeny Ustinovich examines how the Fourth Gospel invites Christ's followers into this same way of seeing, where the glory of God is found even in the most difficult of circumstances. He explores the relevance of this invitation for the contemporary church as it seeks to minister to victims of war abuse persecution and other forms of violence A powerful resource for dealing with trauma as a Christian community this book offers its readers a deeper understanding of the Gospel of John Christian identity and the role of suffering in the Christian life The Book of Three Diana G.
