Undermining Development The Absence Of Power Among Local Ngos In Af:

Undermining Development Sarah Michael,2004 In some parts of the world it has been demonstrated that the power of local NGOs can contribute to improving the quality of development services Local NGOs in Africa are lagging behind and the author suggests ways to remedy this as well as ways in which donors and international NGOs can help to promote local power

Sorting Africa's Developmental Puzzle Almaz Zewde,2010-06-02 Sorting Africa's Developmental Puzzle The Participatory Social Learning Theory as an Alternative Approach is a comprehensive exploration of why Africa has not managed to achieve a sustainable and self regenerating development over the past half century of effort The work situates the problems of Africa's persistent underdevelopment in the practices employed by national political elites donors and lenders to African development that played roles in determinant policy and planning Unlike many newly developed countries and regions and contrary to the historical experiences of developed countries where ordinary people were full stakeholders and drivers of development Africa's development has been top down expert and capital driven mechanical and typically externally designed Ordinary Africans were made marginal to development This approach to Africa's development was devoid of building the people and their institutions as the legitimate means of development The entrusting of Africa's development to local and international elites to the exclusion of the people from decision making and full participation has led to grievous deficits in the formation of human and social capital and legitimate economic social and political institutions for development The book offers a studied alternative that can positively change Africa's development direction The Participatory Social Learning Approach The philosophical theoretical historical and heuristic origins of this alternative are offered in detail within this book

Knowledge, Power and Development Agendas Emma Mawdsley,2002 Knowledge Power and Development Agendas explores how southern NGOs can have more of a voice in determining the work they actually do and how they can get more of their ideas on to the international development agenda It reports recommendations for overcoming challenging or bypassing information loops on funding ideas and networks

The NGO Factor in Africa Maurice N. Amutabi,2013-09-13 The book breaks new ground in understanding the role of Non Governmental Organizations NGOs in Africa The book historicizes NGOs using the Rockefeller Foundation as a case study looking at its tripartite paradoxical roles as an agent of colonialism globalization and development underdevelopment It deploys interdisciplinary devices to show how the RF projects have engaged in marginalization patronage and othering of African values and customs and the ensuing controversies Using globalization postmodern and postcolonial theories the book deconstructs the long held myths about NGO inviolability and opens ground for understanding their strengths It interrogates sites of contestation apprehension and possibilities that the RF has produced Using RF projects it looks at structures of hegemony race power class and gender that the RF has created The book illustrates the extent to which the RF has been instrumental in spreading capitalism imperialism in economic political cultural and social realms through globalization It desists from the grand narrative approach that has dominated African history in the past but instead gives agency and voice to those that have previously been marginalized NGOs and Instable Power Dynamics Judith de Visser,2017 Silences in NGO Discourse Issa G. Shivji,2007-06-30 One of the most articulate critics of the destructive effects of neoliberal policies in Africa and in particular of the ways in which they have eroded the gains of independence Issa Shivji shows in two extensive essays in this book that the role of NGOs in Africa cannot be understood without placing them in their political and historical context As structural adjustment programs were imposed across Africa in the 1980s and 1990s the international financial institutions and development agencies began giving money to NGOs for programs to minimize the more glaring inequalities perpetuated by their policies As a result NGOs have flourished and played an unwitting role in consolidating the neoliberal hegemony in Africa Shivji argues that if social policy is to be determined by citizens rather than the donors African NGOs must become catalysts for change rather than the catechists of aid that they are today Contribution of Local Ngos in the Development Process Aminata Cisse,1996 The Elusive Promise of NGOs in Africa Susan Dicklitch,1998 This work challenges the dominant discourse of neo liberalism which places NGOs and civil society at the forefront of democratization and development in Africa Based on nine months field research in Uganda the study draws on evidence from the successfully liberalizing country and shows how NGO potential for democratization and development has been subverted by state directives structural conditions and historical conditions as well as the internal limitations of NGOs Can NGOs Make a Difference? Anthony Bebbington,Samuel Hickey,Diana C. Mitlin,2008-02-15 Can non governmental organisations contribute to more socially just alternative forms of development Or are they destined to work at the margins of dominant development models determined by others Addressing this question this book brings together leading international voices from academia NGOs and the social movements It provides a comprehensive update to the NGO literature and a range of critical new directions to thinking and acting around the challenge of development alternatives The book s originality comes from the wide range of new case study material it presents the conceptual approaches it offers for thinking about development alternatives and the practical suggestions for NGOs The Role of Grassroots Communication in NGO Development Projects in Africa: A Case Study of ABT Associates in the US Government's Indoor Residual Spraying Program in Tamale, Northern Ghana Esther Sackey,2014 One factor that has been understudied is the important role communication plays in NGO dealings with local communities Riddell Robinson 1992 Riddell and Robinson explain that there are often problems in communication between the locals who are supposed to be the beneficiaries of these projects and the workers who represent the charitable organizations The lack of effective communication between the locals and the NGOs creates an apathetic attitude on the part of the locals who often do not make use of the aid that is intended for them Riddell and Robinson 1992 explained that projects which have little potential for sustainability are non participatory with a low level of commitment on the part of beneficiaries and there is little chance of the project becoming economically viable The authors explained that this makes it hard for the aid agencies to empower their target population to take ownership of the projects Vivian 1994 also notes that the lack of effective communication between NGOs and the local people creates suspicion and doubt about the intentions of the aid agencies Often the local people see these projects as foreign and not aligned with their local understanding of development and culture Adedokun 2010 explains that development initiatives without effective communication between NGOs and local recipients cannot succeed if the initiative is to be sustained In order to bring development change among marginalized and vulnerable population groups participation must be fostered through communication because this is the only way to transform the community The objective of this research is to investigate the effectiveness of communication in the activities of an NGO community development project and how this impacts the success or failure of the project The focus will be on how NGO community development projects are communicated in relation to local peoples everyday experiences It will investigate how grass roots communication may help or hinder NGOs in their project initiation implementation monitoring and evaluation
