The Importance of Teaching

Humanities in Higher Education Institutions Victoria Plashakova, University of Vermont. College of Education and Social Services, 2009 The humanities have always been under attack in the higher education of the United States of America Corporate culture of the university requires the most money distributed towards research and specialization while making employability of the graduates the main goal of education With two thirds of all majors being in business and finance humanities don't seem to play a big role in higher education overall This work makes an attempt in defense of liberal arts education to our students and the importance of teaching the subjects like English Literature and Philosophy independent of a student's major concentration Even in our age of specialized and corporatized education these courses are of great importance These subjects can help young people find their way in this confusing web of life weaved out of pressure expectations failures problems fears
