

Plein et délié :

C'est, respectivement, les parties les plus épaisses et les plus fines du caractère.

Empattement :

C'est un petit trait ou une forme rectangule ou triangle qui prolonge les extrémités des lettres.

Crénage :

C'est l'ajustement de la distance (espace optique) entre les lettres pour une police de caractère donnée. Idéalement, elle doit être réglée à la main (ou plutôt à l'œil) et être homogène pour toutes les paires de lettres.

Axe droit / Axe oblique :

C'est l'axe de construction de la lettre. Un axe droit indique un dessin symétrique de la lettre, sans contraste dans les épaisseurs. Un axe oblique a pour effet d'ajouter du plein et du délié dans l'aspect de la lettre.

Contreforme :

C'est l'espace partiellement ou totalement clos à l'intérieur de la panse d'une lettre.

Chasse :

C'est la largeur d'un caractère augmentée de ses approches, c'est à dire les espaces qui le séparent du caractère précédent et suivant. On dit qu'un caractère chasse plus ou moins large en fonction de son dessin.

Ligature :

C'est la fusion de deux graphèmes d'une écriture pour en former un nouveau. Le « œ » est une ligature bien connue en français, mais beaucoup d'autres existent comme st, ft, œ, etc.

Variantes typographiques :

Ce sont les différents dessins de lettre que l'on peut trouver pour une police de caractère. On trouve des variantes de gras (light, regular, bold, black, etc.), d'oblique (italique) et de chasse (condensé / régulier / étendu).
