

IN CONGRESS, July 4, 1776.

States of America

Unanimous Declaration of the Thirteen United States of America

When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth a separate and equal station, it is their right, it is their duty, that all such assents should be solemnly, and at great length, declared in the presence of the Deity, and that the assent be a unanimous one. We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, — That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such Principles and organizing its Powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Liberty. Prudence in such a Case, may dictate a Dissolution of the old Government, and the institution of a new one; — But when a long train of Abuses and Misuses, connected together, has led to the Absoluteness of Tyranny, and the Oppression now goes so far, as to excite a Desire in the Minds of the most thoughtful and virtuous Men, — whether in a large or a small Colony, or State, — that they should throw off the Yoke of such a Government, and by the same Act establish new Foundations of their Freedom, — they are not in the wrong, — they are rightly and necessarily so.
