What Infants Know:

How Infants Know Minds Vasudevi Reddy, 2008-04-30 Most psychologists claim we begin to develop a theory of mind at age two or three by inference deduction and logical reasoning But does this mean small babies are unaware of minds Reddy deals with the persistent problem of other minds that we know other minds if we can respond to them And we respond most richly in engagement with them

Infant and Toddler Development from Conception to Age 3 Mary Jane Maguire-Fong, Marsha Peralta, 2018-11 This book invites those caring for infants to join as companions on an incredible journey Each chapter taps a distinct area of research to shed light on babies biological expectations for care and their amazing competence as active participants in that care Exploring each domain of development with policy and practice recommendations the authors offer important insights into How prenatals read and adapt to characteristics of their environment How fetus and mother respond in sync to a cascade of hormones that facilitate healthy birth breastfeeding bonding and immune system development How infants search for proximity to caring responsive others as a means of regulating physiological systems and making friends How infants gather statistics on language through interactions with companions How infants learn as they investigate objects and people within everyday play and interactions I have never experienced a book that more clearly and purposefully communicates the day by day development of infants and the essential role adults play in the optimization of that development From the Foreword by J Ronald Lally WestEd Center for Child Family Studies author of For Our Babies Infant development comes alive in this book From the Afterword by Ed Tronick Distinguished University Professor University of Massachusetts Boston A must read for anyone interested in young children This will be a valuable resource for academics clinicians and caregivers Bruce D Perry ChildTrauma Academy This extraordinary collection of stories invites us to explore and reflect on what it s like to be a baby new to the world and full of curiosity Elizabeth Jones faculty emerita Pacific Oaks College

What Babies Know Elizabeth Spelke, 2022 What do infants know and how does the knowledge that they begin with prepare them for learning about the particular physical cultural and social world in which they live Answers to this question shed light not only on infants but on children and adults in all cultures because the core knowledge possessed by infants never goes away Instead it underlies the unspoken common sense knowledge of people of all ages in all societies By studying babies researchers gain insights into infants themselves into older children s prodigious capacities for learning and into some of the unconscious assumptions that guide our thoughts and actions as adults To share these insights Spelke distils the findings from research in developmental comparative and cognitive psychology with excursions into studies of animal cognition in psychology and in systems and cognitive neuroscience and studies in the computational cognitive sciences Weaving across these disciplines she paints a picture of what young infants know and what they quickly come to learn about objects places number geometry and people s actions social engagements and mental states
