What is epilepsy?

Epilepsy is a long-term condition characterized by recurrent, unprovoked seizures. It is caused by abnormal electrical activity in the brain, which can be triggered by a variety of factors, including genetic factors, brain injury, infection, and stroke. The condition is diagnosed when a person has had at least two unprovoked seizures, or one seizure followed by a high risk of having a second seizure within 10 years.

What is an epileptic seizure?

An epileptic seizure is a sudden, unprovoked burst of abnormal electrical activity in the brain. This activity can cause a variety of symptoms, including loss of consciousness, muscle spasms, and changes in behavior. Seizures are caused by a variety of factors, including genetic factors, brain injury, infection, and stroke.

Partial seizures are characterized by abnormal electrical activity in a specific area of the brain. This activity can cause a variety of symptoms, including changes in sensation, movement, or behavior. Generalized seizures are characterized by abnormal electrical activity in both sides of the brain. This activity can cause a variety of symptoms, including loss of consciousness, muscle spasms, and changes in behavior.

Generalized seizures

Generalized seizures involve abnormal electrical activity in both sides of the brain. This activity can cause a variety of symptoms, including loss of consciousness, muscle spasms, and changes in behavior. There are several types of generalized seizures, including tonic-clonic seizures, absence seizures, and atypical absence seizures. Tonic-clonic seizures are characterized by a period of muscle stiffness followed by rhythmic muscle spasms. Absence seizures are characterized by a brief loss of consciousness. Atypical absence seizures are characterized by a brief loss of consciousness and changes in behavior.

Partial (focal) seizures

Partial (focal) seizures involve abnormal electrical activity in a specific area of the brain. This activity can cause a variety of symptoms, including changes in sensation, movement, or behavior. There are several types of partial (focal) seizures, including simple partial seizures, complex partial seizures, and secondary generalized seizures. Simple partial seizures are characterized by changes in sensation, movement, or behavior. Complex partial seizures are characterized by changes in sensation, movement, or behavior and a brief loss of consciousness. Secondary generalized seizures are characterized by a brief loss of consciousness and changes in behavior.

Diagnosing and treating epilepsy
The diagnosis of epilepsy is based on a combination of factors, including a detailed history of the patient's seizures, a physical examination, and an EEG. Treatment of epilepsy is based on the type and frequency of the patient's seizures. There are several types of anti-epileptic drugs (AEDs) available, and the choice of drug depends on the patient's individual circumstances. In some cases, surgery may be an option for patients who do not respond to medication.

Managing your epilepsy
Patients with epilepsy should work closely with their healthcare provider to manage their condition. This includes taking medication as prescribed, avoiding triggers, and having a seizure action plan. It is also important for patients to have regular check-ups and to report any changes in their symptoms to their healthcare provider.
