Talking Gender and Sexuality Paul McIlvenny, 2002. This edited volume brings together scholars from psychology, linguistics, sociology, and communication science to investigate how performative notions of gender and sexuality can be fruitfully explored with the rich set of tools that have been developed by conversation analysis and discursive psychology for analyzing everyday practical language use, agency, and identity in talk. Contributors re-examine the foundations of earlier research on gender in spoken interaction, critically appraise this research to see if and how it translates successfully into the study of sexuality in talk, and promote innovative alternatives that integrate the insights of recent feminist and queer theory with qualitative studies of talk and conversation. Detailed empirical analyses of naturally occurring talk are used to uncover how gender and sexual identities, agencies, and desires are contingently accomplished in conversational practices. Collectively, they pose the important question of what a critical theory of talk, gender, and sexuality ought to look like if it is to be sensitive to a politics of conversation analysis.
