

PARENTAGE. Parentage expressions are probably the most important relationships so far recognized. Generally both mother and father are given, although normally, usually the father, is recorded. When both are given, the mother is usually mentioned first. The typical pattern begins with the names/titles of the child, followed by a child-of-mother glyph, names/titles of the mother, a child-of-father glyph, and finally the names/titles of the father.

The text of Yaxchilan Hieroglyphic Stairway 3, Step IV-tread, which records the name of Shield Jaguar I of Yaxchilan, is a typical example:

Several expressions designating parentage are now known in the inscriptions. We have seen four in the examples above. Others include:

Child of Mother

These are also probably yol.

Child of Father

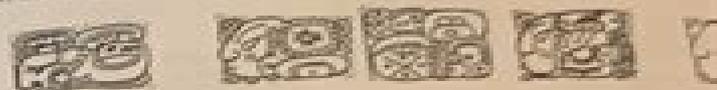

Child of Parent. This designator has as its main sign T712, a representation of an abstract character, which probably implies blood lineage in some way. Generally the T712 is combined with or is preceded by a-bird.

U-bah u-ch'oh = "His created thing"

It is used for child of both mother and father. In the first example shown it designates the father of Ruler A. of Tikal. It is used to indicate the mother of Shield Jaguar in the text of Yaxchilan Stela 7.

A relatively rare glyph occurs both at Palenque and Yaxchilan; no name has been published.

Mother of

OTHER FAMILIAL RELATIONSHIPS. The general meanings of the glyphs we've just examined were initially identified primarily by their positions in texts between the name of a person and the names of other persons presumed to be parents. Most of these were recognized at least ten years ago. Further recognition of familial relationships has begun to be recognized based largely upon the glyphs that occur in positions in texts that are likely positions for relational terms between the names of the two individuals. A major contributor to this development was David Stuart (1989).

Maya Calendar Origins Prudence M. Rice,2007-12 In Maya Political Science Time Astronomy and the Cosmos Prudence M Rice proposed a new model of Maya political organization in which geopolitical seats of power rotated according to a 256 year calendar cycle known as the May This fundamental connection between timekeeping and Maya political organization sparked Rice s interest in the origins of the two major calendars used by the ancient lowland Maya one 260 days long and the other having 365 days In Maya Calendar Origins she presents a provocative new thesis about the origins and development of the calendrical system Integrating data from anthropology archaeology art history astronomy ethnohistory myth and linguistics Rice argues that the Maya calendars developed about a millennium earlier than commonly thought around 1200 BC as an outgrowth of observations of the natural phenomena that scheduled the movements of late Archaic hunter gatherer collectors throughout what became Mesoamerica She asserts that an understanding of the cycles of weather and celestial movements became the basis of power for early rulers who could thereby claim control over supernatural cosmic forces Rice shows how time became materialized transformed into status objects such as monuments that encoded calendrical or temporal concerns as well as politicized becoming the foundation for societal order political legitimization and wealth Rice s research also sheds new light on the origins of the Popol Vuh which Rice believes encodes the history of the development of the Mesoamerican calendars She also explores the connections between the Maya and early Olmec and Izapan cultures in the Isthmian region who shared with the Maya the cosmovision and ideology incorporated into the calendrical systems
