

From the catchment to the Reef – it's all connected

CLIMATE
Climate change is predicted to increase the intensity of rainfall, floods and tropical cyclones which severely impact marine water quality and ecosystems. Climate change will also affect the Reef through rising sea levels, ocean acidification and warmer waters causing impacts to biota.

WATERWAYS
Rivers and streams are an important pathway for many important sources of stressors to coastal ecosystems and marine environments. They also provide a pathway for pollutants to flow to the Reef.

AGRICULTURE
 contributes for approximately 60% of land use in NSW catchments and is the main source of excess nitrogen, fine sediments and pesticides that flow to the Reef.

MODIFICATIONS
 to natural ecosystems and creation of artificial features, such as dams and rippled pastures, impact water quality by interfering with the natural connections of a pathway from catchment to the Reef.

CLEARING of forested and riparian vegetation contributes to erosion, instability of landscapes.

GROUND COVER
 stabilises soil preventing erosion from farming and grazing and reducing sediment to flow to the Reef.

URBAN AND INDUSTRIAL development and land use activities cause excess nutrients, sediments and other pollutants such as heavy metals and plastics to flow to the Reef.

WETLANDS
 connect catchments to the Reef. They reduce the impacts of floods and help to filter sediment inputs.

URBAN DEVELOPMENT
 including housing, commercial and industrial activities, urban infrastructure, roads and parking lots, increases sediment and pollutants.

AQUATIC AND MARINE ECOSYSTEMS

PESTICIDES
 used to kill or suppress weeds and freshwater ecosystems and restrict coral growth.

SEAGRASS MEADOWS
 are the primary food source for dugongs and green turtles. Increased sediment levels reduce the light available to seagrass, restricting and reducing coral reefs.

SEDIMENT
 blocks light to and smothers corals and suppresses restricting growth. When combined with nutrients, the sediment forms flows that can impact coral health.

RECOVERY FROM BLEACHING events and other impacts is supported by good water quality. It is important that water quality impacts from both the catchment and marine environments are properly managed while climate change is being addressed.

CULTURAL VALUES AND COMMUNITIES are supported by healthy waterways, delivering a range of benefits through access to resources, employment and recreation.

NUTRIENTS are linked to eutrophication of the reef waterways, causing excess of marine invertebrate and coral growth of algae and algal blooms.

Gower, 1980 Ecological Risks National Academy of Sciences, Polish Academy of Sciences, 1990-02-01 Handbook of Catchment Management Robert C. Ferrier, Alan Jenkins, 2009-09-11 This book addresses the fundamental requirement for an interdisciplinary catchment based approach to managing and protecting water resources that crucially includes an understanding of land use and its management In this approach the hydrological cycle links mountains to the sea and ecosystems in rivers groundwaters lakes wetlands estuaries and coasts forming an essential continuum directly influenced by human activity The book provides a synthesis of current and future thinking in catchment management and shows how the specific problems that arise in water use policy can be addressed within the context of an integrated approach to management The book is written for advanced students researchers fellow academics and water sector professionals such as planners and regulators The intention is to highlight examples and case studies that have resonance not only within natural sciences and engineering but with academics in other fields such as socio economics law and policy Grassland Productivity and Ecosystem Services Gilles Lemaire, 2011 Grassland ecosystems are deeply affected by human activities and need appropriate management to optimise trade offs between ecosystem functions and services Until now they have mainly been analysed as agro ecosystems for animal production but this book looks beyond the role of grassland as a feeding ground and evaluates other important processes such as carbon sequestration in soils greenhouse gas regulation and biodiversity protection This authoritative volume expertly highlights the need for an immediate balance between agriculture and ecological management for sustainability in the future Responses of Forest Ecosystems to Environmental Changes A. Teller, P. Mathy, J.N.R. Jeffers, 2012-12-06 This book arises out of a symposium on forest and woodland terrestrial ecosystems which was held in Florence on 20-24th May 1991 It was organised jointly by the Commission of the European Communities CEC and the European Science Foundation ESF in association with the Italian Research Council CNR The symposium brought together most of the internationally recognized groups working on forest ecosystems including biologists botanists ecologists soil scientists modellers foresters and policy makers All the CEC countries were represented In addition there was a broad audience from Eastern and Central Europe and from EFTA countries Outstanding experts from outside Europe US Australia Canada Japan China etc were also present In total the symposium was attended by more than 500 participants The structure of this book reflects the main elements of the meeting As such it includes three main sections The first consists of six major state of the art reviews corresponding to the six plenary sessions each followed by a discussion which has been summarized by rapporteurs The reviews were prepared to assess critically the state of current knowledge in ecosystem research and to provide a scientific basis both for policy decisions and for further research Assessing the Ecological Integrity of Running Waters M. Jungwirth, S. Muhar, S. Schmutz, 2012-12-06

The assessment of the ecological integrity of running waters is a prerequisite to an understanding of the effects of human alterations. The evaluation of degradation processes provides key information on how to avoid further negative impacts. The success of future conservation, mitigation, and restoration activities will rely on sound assessment methodologies and their ecological relevance and applicability. Assessment methodologies are therefore an integral part of sustainable river management. This book synthesizes and discusses state-of-the-art experiences in assessment methodologies. Including the latest knowledge on structures, processes, and functions of running waters as a fundamental basis for developing adequate assessment methods, the book focuses on method development, application, and in particular on integrated assessment methods. This book is directed at scientists and managers with the aim of more effective preservation, restoration, and maintenance of the ecological integrity of running water ecosystems.

Water Quality for Ecosystem and Human Health Geneviève M. Carr, James P. Neary, 2008. This document is intended to provide an overview of the major components of surface and ground water quality and how these relate to ecosystem and human health. Local, regional, and global assessments of water quality monitoring data are used to illustrate key features of aquatic environments and to demonstrate how human activities on the landscape can influence water quality in both positive and negative ways. Clear and concise background knowledge on water quality can serve to support other water assessments.

The Ecological Basis for River Management David Harper, Alastair J. D. Ferguson, 1995-02-28. Based on a selection of papers presented at the International Symposium on the Ecological Basis for River Management in March 1993, it addresses the underlying ecological issues in the six major operational functions of river management: water quantity, water quality, management of the natural river environment, management of fish stocks and fisheries, and catchment management.

Carbon, Nutrient and Water Balances of Tropical Rain Forest Ecosystems Subject to Disturbance Jonathan Michael Anderson, 1991.

Solute Modelling in Catchment Systems Stephen T. Trudgill, 1995-11-06. Stephen Trudgill presents an internationally authored research-level text aimed at providing a synopsis of developments in solute modelling in catchment ecosystems over the last ten years. The volume includes particular advances in solute modelling, especially at the catchment scale, emphasising the influences of weathering, ecosystem processes, and hydrological processes, as well as the application of models and modelling principles. The intended audience for the book is research scientists in cognate fields and postgraduate research workers, although it is especially aimed at those interested in catchment systems. It will also enable specialists to grasp the essentials of topics outside their own field. The book will be of use in a management context, as successful water quality management actions are often dependent upon the predictive success of models. It will also show how models can be used to assess the sensitivity of solute production to environmental change and human influence, such as land use change and variation in atmospheric inputs, focussing upon surface catchments rather than groundwater and soil solutes.
