We Are All Multiculturalists Now:

We are All Multiculturalists Now Nathan Glazer, 1998 The melting pot is no more Where not very long ago we sought assimilation we now pursue multiculturalism Nowhere has this transformation been more evident than in the public schools where a traditional Eurocentric curriculum has yielded to diversity and often to confrontation and confusion In a book that brings clarity and reason to this highly charged issue Nathan Glazer explores these sweeping changes He offers an incisive account of why we all advocates and skeptics alike have become multiculturalists and what this means for national unity civil society and the education of our youth Focusing particularly on the impact in public schools Glazer dissects the four issues uppermost in the minds of people on both sides of the multicultural fence Whose truth do we recognize in the curriculum Will an emphasis on ethnic roots undermine or strengthen our national unity in the face of international disorder Will attention to social injustice past and present increase or decrease civil disharmony and strife Does a multicultural curriculum enhance learning by engaging students interest and by raising students self esteem or does it teach irrelevance at best and fantasy at worst Glazer argues cogently that multiculturalism arose from the failure of mainstream society to assimilate African Americans anger and frustration at their continuing separation gave black Americans the impetus for rejecting traditions that excluded them But willingly or not we are all multiculturalists now Glazer asserts and his book gives us the clearest picture yet of what there is to know to fear and to ask of ourselves in this new identity Who We Be Jeff Chang, 2014-10-21

Incorporating powerful images from a range of artistic venues an intellectual follow up to the award winning Cant Stop Won t Stop considers how violent culture disputes are still occurring in spite of the past half century s progress in race relations

Mosaic Christopher Clausen, 2000-03-20 Contrary to today's widespread emphasis on cultural diversity the United States has become not a multicultural society but the world's first post-cultural society. Cultures, Christopher Clausen argues, have lost power over both public and private behavior. This largely unrecognized transformation has enormous importance for every area of American life from marriage to politics. One of its most prevalent social expressions is an aimless conformist individualism because there is no longer any source of authority or value outside the self. The multiculturalism of leftist politics and the family values of the right are both futile expressions of nostalgia for a world differently interpreted, of course, that is gone forever. In Faded Mosaic, Mr. Clausen brings his analysis down to earth with telling illustrations from contemporary life. He demonstrates how the moral demands and collective identities of America's native and immigrant cultures have vanished. In striking contrast to societies of the past, he declares, the United States today has neither one big culture nor many smaller ones, only a dizzying mixture of freedom and nostalgia. Original and penetrating, a serious critique. It is the great virtue of Faded Mosaic that Mr. Clausen describes our present condition without hysterics or posturing but with the caution, objectivity, and concern that the subject deserves. The wide range of selections will inspire critical classroom discussions. The Promise of Justice. Mac A. Stewart, 2008. Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka, Kansas, 1954, was a landmark decision of the United States Supreme Court in the twentieth century. It overturned the Court's earlier ruling in Plessy v. Ferguson, 1896, declaring the establishment of separate public schools for black and white students as inherently unequal. This victory paved the way for integration in public schools and the civil rights movement of the 1960s. The Promise of Justice: Essays on Brown v. Board of Education assembles fourteen essays about Brown and its consequences in the fifty years following the decision. Several of the essayists in this anthology provide personal recollections of the conditions before and immediately after the decision in Brown. One of the authors was a child plaintiff in a related case. Another was the federal district judge responsible for deciding in favor of and then overseeing integration in a major northern city. Contributors to this volume include legal specialists, sociologists, educators, and political scientists. A history of the legal milestones of integration is included, as well as judgments about the progress that has been made and the need for additional actions to assure racial equality under the law. Ten of these essays first appeared in a special issue of The Negro Educational Review published in January 2005, and four

Eisenach, 2000 America cannot survive without a common faith History has taught us that our national identity and our political order require voluntary religious and civic organizations Following the social political and cultural upheavals of the 1960s Americans are now engaged in a struggle to determine the future of our nation s character and destiny So argues prominent political theorist Eldon J Eisenach in this brilliant and controversial new book Contentious debates over multiculturalism church state relations and immigration illustrate America s current identity crisis Creating a common vision for America is no easy task but Eisenach describes how the moral and spiritual foundations of a new coherent American identity and faith are already emerging As in the past the next religious establishment s primary expression will be a political and cultural order that mediates and integrates personal ethnic religious and civic identities The Next Religious Establishment alerts readers to the changing landscape of America s identity and invites us to participate in its redefinition This book will profoundly alter the way political theorists intellectual historians and theologians conceptualize America s past present and future
