Zouping In Transition:

Zouping in Transition Andrew George Walder, 1998 Zouping offers important general lessons for the study of China's rural transformation. The authors in this volume all participants in a unique field research project undertaken from 1988 to 1992 address questions that are far from simple and about which there is some controversy. The questions are grouped around two issues. The first is the role of local governments as economic actors. What is this role, how have they played it, and how can we explain their behavior? Have they dominated rural economies through public ownership of industry and local planning, or has the role of local governments diminished with the rise of market transactions and private ownership? The second issue is market reform and inequality. Have rural cadres enjoyed income advantages in the new market environment? Has the provision of such collective services as education and health care declined, leading to new forms of inequality? The chapters on the role of local government all point to a single conclusion: one cannot explain the rapid development of Zouping without reference to the role of local governments and of local government officials as economic actors. Scholarly writings about the transitional economies have often ignored or distorted this aspect of China's reform experience. On the second issue, changes in inequality owing to market reform, the authors present mixed findings but contribute rich new data to the research on this issue.

Zouping Revisited Jean C. Oi, Steven Goldstein, 2018-02-20 China has undergone dramatic change in its economic institutions in recent years but surprisingly little change politically. Somehow the political institutions seem capable of governing a vastly more complex market economy and a rapidly changing labor force. One possible explanation examined in Zouping Revisited is that within the old organizational molds there have been subtle but profound changes to the ways these governing bodies actually work. The authors take as a case study the local government of Zouping County and find that it has been able to evolve significantly through ad hoc bureaucratic adaptations and accommodations that drastically change the operation of government institutions. Zouping has long served as a window into local level Chinese politics, economy, and culture. In this volume, top scholars analyze the most important changes in the county over the last two decades. The picture that emerges is one of institutional agility and creativity as a new form of resilience within an authoritarian regime.

Elusive Adulthoods Deborah Durham, Jacqueline Solway, 2017-10-12 Essays on the changing meanings of adulthood in places around the world. An important collection that furthers anthropological work on life stages. Susan Reynolds Whyte, author of Generations in Africa: Connections and Conflicts. Elusive Adulthoods examines why, in recent years, complaints about an inability to achieve adulthood have been heard in societies around the world. By exploring the changing meaning of adulthood in Botswana, China, Sudan, Papua New Guinea, Russia, Sri Lanka, Uganda, and the United States, contributors to this volume pose the problem of what is adulthood and examine how the field of anthropology has come to overlook this meaningful stage in its studies. Through these case studies, we discover different means of recognizing the achievement of adulthood, such as through negotiated relationships with others, including grown children, and as a form of upward class mobility We also encounter the difficulties that come from a sense of having missed full adulthood instead jumping directly into old age in the course of rapid social change or a reluctance to embrace the stability of adulthood and necessary subordination to job and family In all cases the contributors demonstrate how changing political and economic factors form the background for generational experience and understanding of adulthood which is a major focus of concern for people around the globe as they negotiate changing ways of living

Governing Educational Desire Andrew B. Kipnis, 2011-02-15 Parents in China greatly value higher education for their children but the intensity and effects of their desire to achieve this goal have largely gone unexamined until now Governing Educational Desire explores the cultural political and economic origins of Chinese desire for a college education as well as its vast consequences which include household and national economic priorities birthrates ethnic relations and patterns of governance Where does this desire come from Andrew B Kipnis approaches this question in four different ways First he investigates the role of local context by focusing on family and community dynamics in one Chinese county Zouping Then he widens his scope to examine the provincial and national governmental policies that affect educational desire Next he explores how contemporary governing practices were shaped by the Confucian examination system uncovering the historical forces at work in the present Finally he looks for the universal in the local considering the ways aspects of educational desire in Zouping spread throughout China and beyond In doing so Kipnis provides not only an illuminating analysis of education in China but also a thought provoking reflection on what educational desire can tell us about the relationship between culture and government

Spatial Contexts of Urbanization and Land Conservation in North China Mark Gregory Henderson, 2004 From Village to City Andrew B. Kipnis, 2016-03-29 Between 1988 and 2013 the Chinese city of Zouping transformed from an impoverished village of 30 000 people to a bustling city of over 300 000 complete with factories high rises parks shopping malls and all the infrastructure of a wealthy East Asian city From Village to City paints a vivid portrait of the rapid change of Zouping its environs and the lives of the once rural people who live there Despite its modernization and higher standards of living Zouping is far from a utopia its inhabitants face new challenges and problems such as alienation class formation and exclusion patriarchy and pollution To understand this transformation Andrew B Kipnis has developed a theory of urbanization demonstrated in his compelling portrayal of an emerging metropolis and the hopes fears joys and sorrows of the people who call it home Provided by publisher

A County of Culture Stig Thøgersen, 2002 An analysis of educational reforms in modern China and their impact on rural inhabitants Hitotsubashi Journal of Economics ,1998 Proceedings Boon Chye Lee, Charles Harvie, 2000 Communities and Markets in Economic Development Masahiko Aoki, The late Yujiro Hayami, 2001-05-31 This book explores the role of community in facilitating the transition to market relationships in economic development and in controlling and sustaining local public goods such as irrigation forests grazing land and fishing grounds Previously it was customary to classify economic systems in terms of varying combinations of state and market control of resource allocation In contrast this book recognizes community as the third major element of economic systems This new approach also departs from the conventional view that markets and community norms should be treated as mutually exclusive means of organizing economic activity instead clarifying the situations in which they may become complementary Further discussion focuses on the conditions under which management of local commons can and should be delegated to local communities rather than subjected to the control of central government These and other issues are investigated by twenty one leading scholars from economic history development economics agricultural economics and institutional economics The resulting volume is the latest in a set of four books about East Asian developmental experiences co sponsored by the Economic Institute of the World Bank and the Stanford Institute of Economic Policy Research It will appeal to economists and other social scientists with an interest in economic development history comparative systems and institutional economics

Changing Meanings of Citizenship in Modern China Merle Goldman, Elizabeth J. Perry, 2002-06-30 This collection of essays addresses the meaning and practice of political citizenship in China over the past century raising the question of whether reform initiatives in citizenship imply movement toward increased democratization After slow but steady moves toward a new conception of citizenship before 1949 there was a nearly complete reversal during the Mao regime with a gradual reemergence beginning in the Deng era of concerns with the political rights as well as the duties of citizens The distinguished contributors to this volume address how citizenship has been understood in China from the late imperial era to the present day the processes by which citizenship has been fostered or undermined the influence of the government the different development of citizenship in mainland China and Taiwan and the prospects of strengthening citizens rights in contemporary China Valuable for its century long perspective and for placing the historical patterns of Chinese citizenship within the context of European and American experiences

Changing Meanings of Citizenship in Modern China investigates a critical issue for contemporary Chinese society

Some Assembly Required Calvin Chen, 2008 One linchpin of China's expansion has been township and village enterprises TVEs a vast group of firms with diverse modes of ownership and structure Based on the author's fieldwork in Zhejiang this book explores the emergence and success of rural enterprises This study also examines how ordinary rural residents have made sense of and participated in the industrialization engulfing them in recent decades How much does TVE success depend on the ruthless exploitation of workers How did peasants turned workers develop such impressive skills so quickly To what extent do employees values affect the cohesion and operations of companies And how long can peasant workers sustain these efforts in the face of increasing market competition The author argues that the resilience of these factories has as much to do with how authority is defined and how people interact as it does with the ability to generate profits How social capital was deployed and replenished at critical moments was central to the eventual rise and consolidation of these enterprises as effective robust institutions Without mutual respect company leaders would have found it impossible to improve their firms productivity workplace stability and long term viability

Understanding Contemporary China Robert E. Gamet, 2008 The third edition of Understanding Contemporary China retains all the useful features of the previous editions but has been thoroughly updated to reflect such current issues and challenges as China's dynamic economic growth its changing social and political culture its growing international presence as a mediator investor and disbursing of foreign aid recent developments in the standoff with Taiwan and the ever growing impact of environmental degradation Assuming no prior knowledge on the part of the reader the book was designed as a core text for Introduction to China courses and can also be used effectively in a variety of discipline oriented curriculums especially political science and sociology Numerous maps and photographs enhance the text

Damage Control Gungwu Wang, Yongnian Zheng, 2003 The Chinese Communist Party CCP with its 66 million members is the largest ruling political party in the world Scholars and policymakers are watching whether the Party will wither away as a result of drastic socio economic changes At the party s 16th Congress in November 2002 Jiang Zemin stepped down as Secretary General This was the first time in the People s Republic of China s history that a physically healthy party boss stepped down without intensive political struggles among top leaders the development of the CCP has been one of the major areas that the East Asian Institute has monitored over the years This collection represents a joint effort by scholars in the institute to understand the CCP under Jiang Zemin All the papers were previously circulated as working papers and background briefs produced by the East Asian Institute and were refined and updated for this publication

Fighting Famine in North China Lillian M. Li, 2007 This monumental work provides a new perspective on the historical significance of famines in China over the past three hundred years It examines the relationship between the interventionist state policies of the eighteenth century Qing emperors the golden age of famine relief the environmental and political crises of the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries when China was called the Land of Famine and the ambitions of the Mao era which tragically led to the greatest famine in human history In addition to a wide array of documentary sources the book employs quantitative analysis to measure the economic impact of natural crises state policies and markets In this way the theories of Qing statesmen that have received much attention in recent scholarship are linked to actual practices and outcomes Using the Zhili Hebei region as its focus the book also reveals the unusual role played by the institutions and policies designed to ensure food security for the capital Beijing
