Spatial Archaeology:

Spatial Archaeology David L. Clarke,1977 Beyond the Map Gary R. Lock,2000 This set of papers by European and North American archaeologists explore the interface between new spatial technologies and areas of theoretical concern in spatial archaeology Differing aspects of landscape such as vision perception and movement are explored through a series of case studies that focus on how spatial technologies can influence archaeological interpretation and to what extent these new technologies can be manipulated to take us beyond 2 dimensional maps Individual site based analyses and new applications of predictive modelling are also presented and assessed together with the wider questions of spatial technologies within heritage management

Spatial Technology and Archaeology David Wheatley,Mark Gillings,2013-02-05 Geographical Information Systems GIS and related spatial technologies have a new and powerful role to play in archaeological interpretation Beginning with a conceptual approach to the representation of space adopted by GIS this book examines spatial databases the acquisition and compilation of data the analytical compilation of data the analytical functionality of GIS and the creation and utilization of critical foundation data layers such as the Digital Elevation Model DEM The ways in which GIS can most usefully facilitate archaeological analysis and interpretation are then explored particularly as a tool for the management of archaeological resources Formal analysis of archaeological material and the use of trend surface contouring and interpolation procedures are considered along with predictive modeling analysis of visibility and intervisibility Finally there is a discussion of leading edge issues including three dimensional GIS object oriented GIS the relationship between GIS and Virtual Reality technologies and the integration of GIS with distributed systems and the Internet The approach is light and technical detail is kept to a minimum recognizing that most readers are simply interested in using GIS effectively The text is carefully illustrated with worked case studies using archaeological data Spatial Technology and Archaeology provides a single reference source for archaeologists students professionals and academics in archaeology as well as those in anthropology and related disciplines

Archaeological Spatial Analysis Mark Gillings,Piraye Hacıgüzeller,Gary Lock,2020-01-16 Effective spatial analysis is an essential element of archaeological research this book is a unique guide to choosing the appropriate technique applying it correctly and understanding its implications both theoretically and practically Focusing upon the key techniques used in archaeological spatial analysis this book provides the authoritative yet accessible methodological guide to the subject which has thus far been missing from the corpus Each chapter tackles a specific technique or application area and follows a clear and coherent structure First is a richly referenced introduction to the particular technique followed by a detailed description of the methodology then an archaeological case study to illustrate the application of the technique and conclusions that point to the implications and potential of the technique within archaeology The book is designed to function as the main textbook for archaeological spatial analysis courses at undergraduate and post graduate level while its user friendly structure makes it also suitable for self learning by archaeology students as well as researchers and professionals Spatial Analysis in Archaeology Ian Hodder, Clive Orton, 1976-10-14 This 1976 text is a pioneering study in the applications to archaeology of modern statistical and quantitative techniques. The authors show how these techniques when sensitively employed can dramatically extend and refine the information presented in distribution maps and other analyses of spatial relationships. Techniques of interpretation by inspection can now be made more powerful and rigorous at the same time. Interest has turned from the examination of such sites and artefacts as things to the spatial relationships between such things, their relationships to one another and to landscape features, soils and other resources. This book was the first to apply the available techniques systematically to the special problems and interests of archaeologists. It also demonstrates to geographers and other social scientists who may be familiar with analogous applications in their own fields the exciting interdisciplinary developments this facilitates for example in studies of exchange networks, trade and settlement patterns and cultural history.

Spatial Technology and Archaeology David Wheatley, Intrasite Spatial Analysis in Archaeology Harold Hietala, Paul A. Larson, 1984-11-08 Collection of theoretical discussions and case studies paper by B Spurling and B Hayden separately annotated.

The Interpretation of Archaeological Spatial Patterning Ellen M. Kroll, T. Douglas Price, 1991-02-28 Investigations of archaeological intrasite spatial patterns have generally taken one of two directions: studies that introduced and explored methods for the analysis of archaeological spatial patterns or those that described and analyzed the formation of spatial patterns in actualistic ethnographic, experimental or natural contexts. The archaeological studies were largely quantitative in nature, concerned with the recognition and definition of patterns; the actualistic efforts were often oriented more toward interpretation, dealing with how patterns formed and what they meant. Our research group on archaeological spatial analysis at the University of Wisconsin-Madison has been working for several years on both quantitative and interpretive problems. Both lines of investigation are closely related and are important complements. In order to demonstrate the convergence of archaeological and actualistic studies for the understanding of intrasite spatial patterns, we organized a symposium at the 52nd Annual Meeting of the Society of American Archaeology in Toronto, Canada, in May 1987. The symposium, titled The Interpretation of Stone Age Archaeological Spatial Patterns, was organized into two sessions. The six papers presented in the morning session, five of which comprise Part I of this volume, focused on ethnoarchaeological and experimental research. Michael Schiffer was the discussant for this half of the symposium. Our intention for the ethnoarchaeological contributions to the symposium and volume was the delineation of some of the significant accomplishments achieved thus far by actualistic studies regarding the formation of spatial patterns.

Ian Hodder, 1984 Space - Archaeology's Final Frontier? An Intercontinental Approach Dustin Keeler, Roderick B. Salisbury, 2009-03-26 This book discusses the cultural social and archaeological aspects of space and the impact of spatial concepts in practical archaeological case studies It summarizes recent developments and looks to the future exploring some of the cutting edge ideas in spatial method and theory The past decade has seen significant advances in the tools available for spatial analysis in archaeology and theory and method regarding the spatial character of archaeology must keep pace with these advances Geomorphological and geochemical techniques geographic information systems remotely sensed data virtual reality and electronic survey technology provide new opportunities but also require new ideas This book gives us insight into the ways that people have used space to subsist to recreate their culture in their homelands or in new areas or impose their culture on others Contributors address the way archaeological notions of space and deep time can add to society's understanding of landscape social relationships past environment and cultural heritage The contributions from Europe and North America demonstrate intercontinental connections and explore ways of using dynamic models of spatial patterning to assess human activity within natural and cultural landscapes Global Archaeological Theory Pedro Paulo Funari, Andrés Zarankin, Emily Stovel, 2006-04-07 Archaeological theory has gone through a great upheaval in the last 50 years from the processual theory which wanted to make archaeology more scientific to post processual theory which understands that interpreting human behavior even of past cultures is a subjective study This subjective approach incorporates a plurality of readings thereby implying that different interpretations are always possible allowing us to modify and change our ideas under the light of new information and or interpretive frameworks In this way interpretations form a continuous flow of transformation and change and thus archaeologists do not uncover a real past but rather construct a historical past or a narrative of the past Post processual theory also incorporates a conscious and explicit political interest on the past of the scholar and the subject This includes fields and topics such as gender issues ethnicity class landscapes and consumption This reflects a conscious attempt to also decentralize the discipline from an imperialist point of view to an empowering one Method and theory also means being politically aware and engaged to incorporate diverse critical approaches to improve understanding of the past and the present This book focuses on the fundamental theoretical issues found in the discipline and thus both engages and represents the very rich plurality of the post processual approach to archaeology The book is divided into four sections Issues in Archaeological Theory Archaeological Theory and Method in Action Space and Power in Material Culture and Images as Material Discourse GIS-based Studies in the Humanities and Social Sciences Atsuyuki Okabe,2016-04-19 Studies in the humanities and the social sciences can be enhanced through the use of geographic information systems GIS However this computer aided method of analysis is worthless unless researchers can devote the time necessary to learn what it is what it can do and how to use it Resulting from a six year project entitled Spatial Inf Geographical Information Systems in Archaeology James Conolly,Mark Lake,Mark W. Prehistoric Britain Ann Woodward,J. D. Hill,2017-01-31 Pottery has become one of the major categories of artifact that is used in reconstructing the lives and habits of prehistoric people In these 14 papers members of the Prehistoric Ceramics Research Group discuss the many ways in which pottery is used to study chronology behavioral changes interrelationships between people and between people and their environment technology and production exchange settlement organization cultural expression style and symbolism Sacred Darkness Holley Moyes,2012-04-15 Caves have been used in various ways across human society but despite the persistence within popular culture of the iconic caveman deep caves were never used primarily as habitation sites for early humans Rather in both ancient and contemporary contexts caves have served primarily as ritual spaces In Sacred Darkness contributors use archaeological evidence as well as ethnographic studies of modern ritual practices to envision the cave as place of spiritual and ideological power that emerges as a potent venue for ritual practice Covering the ritual use of caves in Europe Asia Australia Africa Mesoamerica and the US Southwest and Eastern woodlands this book brings together case studies by prominent scholars whose research spans from the Paleolithic period to the present day These contributions demonstrate that cave sites are as fruitful as surface contexts in promoting the understanding of both ancient and modern religious beliefs and practices This state of the art survey of ritual cave use will be
