Souls Belated Edith Wharton, 2004-06-01 She stayed there for a long time in the hypnotized contemplation not of Mrs Cope's present but of her own past. Gannett early that morning had gone off on a long walk; he had fallen into the habit of taking these mountain tramps with various fellow lodgers, but even had he been within reach she could not have gone to him just then. She had to deal with herself first. She was surprised to find how in the last months she had lost the habit of introspection. Since their coming to the Hotel Bellocguardo she and Gannett had tacitly avoided themselves and each other.

The Greater Inclination Edith Wharton, 1900 Apart from Modernism Robin Peel, 2005 The study emphasizes the crucial role that Wharton's contact with Europe had on her writing and the significance intellectually and politically of her relationship with Morton Fullerton and her reading of his books on politics. It locates Wharton in her period, surrounded as she was by discourses which called for political and social change, change which an outlook that Peel calls American Toryism made her reluctant to embrace. Her love of motorcars and her excitement about other technological developments such as aeroplanes was inspired by a feeling of exclusivity and not the democratization of culture which she feared and condemned. France, England, Italy, and America formed the quartet of countries that contained the best and worst of culture, and Peel emphasizes how ironical it was that a writer whose ideological beliefs endorsed the importance of home roots and tradition should have spent so much of her life as a restless, apparently rootless traveler.
