Sources of Productivity Growth David G. Mayes,1996-03-21 Over the past few decades there have been surges in productivity in a number of countries in particular in the UK under the Thatcher government Explanations of these changes have not been satisfactory This compelling 1996 book examines the data relating to these changes at an individual establishment level Chapters cover the UK the USA Canada Japan Australia Belgium Norway and Sweden and comparisons also include Germany and the Netherlands Using a variety of the most up to date methods of analysis the contributors show that there is no single simple explanation Changes in competitive conditions skills innovation and the growth of small firms all have their part to play as does the widespread closure of the least productive establishments Essays on the Sources of Productivity Growth Mark J. Productivity in the U.S. Services Sector Jack E. Triplett,Barry P. Bosworth,2004-09-21 The services industries which include jobs ranging from flipping hamburgers to providing investment advice can no longer be characterized as they have in the past as a stagnant sector marked by low productivity growth They have emerged as one of the most dynamic and innovative segments of the U S economy now accounting for more than three quarters of gross domestic product During the 1990s 19 million additional jobs were created in this sector while growth was stagnant in the goods producing sector Here Jack Triplett and Barry Bosworth analyze services sector productivity demonstrating that fundamental changes have taken place in this sector of the U S economy They show that growth in the services industries fueled the post 1995 expansion in the U S productivity and assess the role of information technology in transforming and accelerating services productivity In addition to their findings for the services sector as a whole they include separate chapters for a diverse range of industries within the sector including transportation and communications wholesale and retail trade and finance and insurance The authors also examine productivity measurement issues chiefly statistical methods for measuring services industry output They highlight the importance of making improvements within the U S statistical system to provide the more accurate and relevant measures essential for analyzing productivity and economic growth Sources of Productivity Growth Werner Smolny,1998 Sources of Productivity Growth and Its Relation to the Distribution of Income in Industrialized Countries and Korea Beung-Geun Mun,1986 Sources of Productivity Growth in the 1990s D. Agricultural Productivity Virgil Ball,2012-12-06 Agricultural Productivity Measurement and Sources of Growth addresses measurement issues and techniques in agricultural productivity analysis applying those techniques to recently published data sets for American agriculture The data sets are used to estimate and explain state level productivity and efficiency differences and to test different approaches to productivity measurement The rise in agricultural productivity is the single most important source of economic growth in the U S farm sector and the rate of productivity growth is estimated to be higher in agriculture than in the non farm sector It is important to understand productivity sources and to measure its growth properly including the effects of environmental externalities Both the methods and the data can be accessed by economists at the state level to conduct analyses for their own states In a sense although not explicitly the book provides a guide to using the productivity data available on the website of the U S Department of Agriculture Economic Research Service It should be of interest to a broad spectrum of professionals in academia the government and the private sector

Sources of Productivity Growth in Uganda Allen Dennis,2016 Uganda s growth in gross domestic product of the 2000s was accompanied by high growth rates of labor productivity across industries producing tradable goods and services This came about primarily as a result of investment in equipment and other fixed assets but also entailed substantial gains in total factor productivity Based on data from two waves of the Uganda Business Indicators survey this paper estimates that economy wide aggregate labor productivity and aggregate TFP grew at average annual rates of 13 t and 3 percent respectively between survey years 2002 and 2009 Part of the growth in productivity on each measure reflected gains from technical progress made at the establishment level and within narrowly defined industries But it was also in part the outcome of reallocation of labor and capital within as well as across industries In particular the paper estimates that about one fifth of the aggregate growth in labor productivity between the two years reflected the shifting of labor toward industries and sectors where it was more productive on average and at the margin The rest of the observed growth in labor productivity reflected gains made within narrowly defined industries But almost in every case 55 to 90 percent of the observed within industry growth in labor productivity represented allocative efficiency gains from the correction of intra industry inter firm misallocation of labor The balance of the observed within industry growth in labor productivity represented establishment level gains in technical efficiency
