Southern Highlands:

Weavers of the Southern Highlands Philis Alvic, 2021-12-14 Weaving centers led the Appalachian Craft Revival at the beginning of the twentieth century. Soon after settlement workers came to the mountains to start schools they expanded their focus by promoting weaving as a way for women to help their family's financial situation. Women wove thousands of guest towels, baby blankets, and place mats that found a ready market in the women's network of religious denominations, arts organizations, and civic clubs. In Weavers of the Southern Highlands, Philis Alvic details how the Fireside Industries of Berea College in Kentucky began with women weaving to supply their children's school expenses and later developed student labor programs where hundreds of students covered their tuition by weaving Arrowcraft associated with Pi Beta Phi School at Gatlinburg, Tennessee, and the Penland Weavers and Potters begun at the Appalachian School at Penland, North Carolina, followed the Berea model. Women wove at home with patterns and materials supplied by the center, returning their finished products to the coordinating organization to be marketed. Dozens of similar weaving centers dotted mountain ridges. The Southern Highlands and Highlanders Walter Claiborne Whitaker, 1916 Conflict and Resource Development in the Southern Highlands of Papua New Guinea Nicole Haley, Ron May, 2007-11-01 The Southern Highlands is one of Papua New Guinea's most resource-rich provinces, but for a number of years the province has been riven by conflict. Longstanding intergroup rivalries, briefly set aside during the colonial period, have been compounded by competition for the benefits provided by the modern state and by fighting over the distribution of returns from the several big mining and petroleum projects located within the province or impinging upon it. Deaths from the various conflicts over the past decade number in the hundreds. As a result of intergroup fighting, criminal activity, and vandalism, a number of businesses have withdrawn from the province. Roadblocks and ambushes have made travel dangerous in many parts, and expatriate missionaries and aid workers have left. Many public servants have abandoned their posts, with the result that state services are not provided. Corruption is rife. Police are often reluctant to act because they are outnumbered and outgunned. This volume brings together a number of authors with deep experience of the Southern Highlands to examine the underlying dynamics of resource development and conflict in the province. Its primary purpose is to provide some background to recent events, but the authors also explore possible approaches to limiting the human and economic costs of the ongoing conflict and breakdown of governance. Literary Excursions in the Southern Highlands George Ellison, 2016-10-31 Extending from Roanoke to Mount Oglethorpe and bounded by the Appalachian Mountains, the Southern Highlands is one of the most diverse natural areas in North America. From beautiful flora like the Fraser magnolia to rare ecosystems such as the mountain cedar glades, the area has been an inspiration for writers and naturalists since it was first explored by William Bartram in 1775. Investigate the biology of the cloudless sulphur butterfly whose erratic flight is used to confuse its prey. Discover the botany of the white ash tree said to produce the most satisfying crack of a baseball bat. Essayist, poet, and naturalist George Ellison explores the abundant wonders of the Southern Highlands in a series of humorous scientific and literary essays vividly illustrated by artist Elizabeth Ellison
