Soviet Foreign Trade The Decision Process:

Soviet Foreign Trade S.H. Gardner, 2012-12-06 The enigma of Soviet society is nowhere more strikingly manifested than in its economic relations with the outside world Western business people even those with representative offices in Moscow often describe their negotiations with the Soviets as a veritable black box affair Offers for purchase and sale are funneled into the bureaucracy usually via the Ministry of Foreign Trade where they are digested for very long periods of time When a response emerges little is usually known about the level at which decisions were made and even less is known about the criteria that were employed to make them In the abstract at least foreign trade decision making in the Western market economies is a rather simple exercise An American consumer will purchase a Toyota rather than a comparable Chrysler if its price expressed in dollars at the market exchange rate is lower The influences of governmental tariffs quantitative restrictions foreign exchange controls buy American policies and the like are usually of only secondary importance In contrast the Soviet consumer whether an individual or an industrial enterprise does not generally have the authority to order the importation of goods or services That authority is concentrated at the top of Soviet society and administered through a labyrinthine system of overlapping bureaucratic agencies Furthermore those Soviet agencies cannot respond to price signals in the same way as the American consumer can because Soviet domestic prices and exchange rates are themselves set rather arbitrarily by governmental agencies The Reorganization of Soviet Foreign Trade, Translated from the Russian Edited and with a foreword by Serge L Levitsky A systematic and authoritative analysis of current Soviet legislation related to the organization and the mechanism of foreign economic relations under perestroika Of particular interest to prospective partners in joint v The Reorganization of Soviet Foreign Trade Mark M. Boguslavski, P.S. Smirnov, S.L. Levitsky, M. M. Boguslavski, Serge L. Levitsky, D.M. McCauley, 2019-07-25 Translated from the Russian Edited and with a foreword by Serge L Levitsky A systematic and authoritative analysis of current Soviet legislation related to the organization and the mechanism of foreign economic relations under perestroika Of particular interest to prospective partners in joint v Soviet Foreign Trade in 1959 [nineteen Hundred and Fifty-nine], 1960 Domestic Value of Soviet Foreign Trade Vladimir G. Treml, Barry L. Kostinsky, 1982 Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists, 1988-06 Process and Power in Soviet Foreign Policy Vernon V. Aspaturian, 1971 Soviet Foreign Economic Policy and International Security Eric Stubbs, 2019-07-26 More than half a decade has passed since Gorbachev launched his prerestroika programme to reform the Soviet Union but the struggle between reformers and conservatives continues to rage while the final outcome and even the goals of the programme remains a mystery Whatever the outcome of this transformation its impact will reverberate well beyond the borders of the USSR to shape US security and commercial policies into the next century This edited volume brings together original essays by US Soviet relations scholars and international business and security experts to explore the many complex and critical issues that the United States must confront in developing its commercial and security policies for the next decade Soviet Studies Guide Tania Kohn,1992 Critical bibliographic references to core literature on land environment and people Soviet history society and culture government and politics international relations armed forces economy business science and technology and general reference Soviet Economic Structure and Performance Paul R. Gregory,Robert C. Stuart,1986 SOVIET ACTIVE MEASURES HEARINGS BEFORE THE PERMANENT SELECT COMMITTEE ON INTELLIGENCE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES NINETY-SEVENTH CONGRESS SECOND SESSION ,1982 Marketing in the Soviet Union Thomas V. Greer,1973 East-West Technology Transfer Morris Bornstein,1985 Soviet Foreign Trade L. Haddad,1967 This study examines the recent trends in Soviet foreign trade with the object of discovering the main factors determining its pattern and growth In the context of Soviet planning institutions and practices international trade theory seemed inappropriate as a framework for analysing the planners decisions regarding foreign trade In such a setting the basis of decisions as to what commodities to import and export is the method of planning by material balances rather than the differences between domestic and international prices or costs Consequently foreign trade in a Soviet type economy serves a different function from that in a market economy Soviet planners themselves viewed foreign trade in an accommodating role subservient to the demands of the plan for domestic growth and development Imports were regarded simply as bridging the gap between domestic supplies and demands while exports disposed of surpluses and financed the necessary imports without much thought to maximising the gains from international trade Throughout much of the period covered in this study the primary concern of the planners was the attainment of a minimum degree of balance or coherence among the various state enterprises so as to ensure a workable planning system It was not until more recent years when near full employment of resources was attained that serious attention was directed to efficiency considerations in the allocation of resources The importance of the planning method and other institutional and administrative factors is generally confirmed by the study of the empirical record of Soviet trade in the aggregate and under the three country grouping the communist the advanced capitalist and the underdeveloped countries Soviet trade with the last group was considered in more detail than the rest mainly because of its very high rate of growth and also because of the number of conflicting interpretations which had been put upon it by other writers The growth of this segment of Soviet trade was greatly facilitated by the bilateral payments agreements and the practice of state trading But a major factor behind the rapid expansion was the element of aid which was more in the form of trade rather than grants The peculiar factor which governed Soviet trade with the western developed countries in the past decade was the technological gap between the Soviet Union and these countries In recent years the expansion of trade with Comecon countries has been determined by specialisation agreements among member states But this trade has not grown to the extent warranted by the agreements because of the obstacles created by national interests and by the absence of an effective system of multilateral payments Further the lack of operational efficiency criteria for planned specialisation has inhibited the expansion of this trade The main difficulty in devising such criteria is the peculiar pricing and costing practices of the Communist countries

The Legal Regulation of Soviet Foreign Economic Relations P. S. Smirnov,1989 The author gives a detailed description of the principles and the system of state bodies responsible for the administration of foreign economic relations of the USSR and characterizes Soviet enterprises and international associations and organizations He analyses direct industrial scientific and technological contexts between Soviet organizations in the CMEA member countries as well as special regulations governing Soviet foreign economic activity Best Sellers ,1983 Commerce Reports ,1922 Russian Review ,1924 The New Russia ,1920 This publication includes the continuation of Bulletins of the Russian liberation committee under the heading Facts and documents Soviet and Eastern European Foreign Trade ,1988
