Abstract

This article is based on "The Negative Impact of Poverty on the Health of Women and Children" and discusses the association between poverty and poor health. Poverty is high on the international development agenda. World conferences and summits have paid attention to the increasing levels of poverty of billions of the world's peoples. The poor die in young age and they usually suffer from communicable diseases, maternal and perinatal conditions, and nutritional deficiencies. They are not only at risk from diseases of the poor but they also suffer from lifestyle health problems that are often found among affluent communities. Unfortunately, in many communities, the most affected are women and children.

Keywords: Poverty; Health; Women; Children

Introduction

Poverty is about not having enough to meet basic needs.^[1] The World Bank describes poverty as hunger, lack of shelter, not having access to school and lack of medical care.^[2] The World Bank estimates that in 2012, 896 million people were living on less than $1.90 per day.^[2] Most of the poor are in the developing countries including Zambia where about 82% of the population lives in abject poverty.^[3] The World Health Organization^[4] states that poverty creates ill-health because it forces people to live in dirty environments. In a poverty-stricken country, the poor suffer from ill health.^[5]

Poverty and debt relief

The burden on the poorest countries has invited attention in recent years. Currently, the 52 poorest countries of which 37 are in Africa, owe a total of 376 billion.^[6] These countries pay the same amount in debt service as they spend on health and education combined. It has been estimated that if funds were diverted back into health and education from debt payment, lives of about 7 million children a year could be saved.^[6] Zambia still spends more on interest payments to the World Bank and International Monetary Fund (IMF) than on health and education for its citizens. In 2001, Zambia spent $158 million on debt service repayments, compared to $24 million for health and $33 million for education.^[6] It is against this background that International organisations are much concerned with the impact of poverty and macro-economic policies on health. The United Nations International Children's Fund (UNICEF) and other agencies concerned with children's health proposed a modification of the programme to protect essential health functions-structural adjustment with a human face. In response to the concern about the impact of macro-economic policies the WHO set up a commission on macroeconomics and health which has conducted a series of studies on how concrete health interventions can lead to economic growth and reduce inequity in developing countries. It recommended a set of measures designed to maximize the poverty reduction and economic development.

Multi-lateral debt relief

Millennium Development Goals (MDGs), the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative (HIPC) and Multi-Lateral Debt (MDR) initiatives.

The Economics Online (2016) gives the following information on the Multi-Lateral Debt Relief

In 1996, the IMF and World Bank launched the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative (HIPC). By 2015, 41 countries were classified as HIPCs - 33 in Africa, 4 in Latin America, 3 in Asia and 1 in the Middle East. The overall objective of the HIPC is to reduce debts to sustainable levels, enabling resources to be reallocated towards poverty reduction. About 45% of the funding is got from the IMF and other multilateral institutions, and the remaining amount, from bilateral creditors. The total cost of this assistance was estimated to be about $75 billion in 2014.

To focus efforts towards the reduction of poverty, the United Nations (UN) launched its Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) in 2000, which included setting the following targets:

- Eradicate extreme poverty and hunger.
- Achieve universal primary education.
- Promote gender equality and empower women.
- Reduce child mortality.
- Improve maternal health.

Sweeping the Earth
Miriam Wyman, 1999. Sweeping the Earth: Women Taking Action for a Healthy Planet looks at the work women are doing around the world to make the connections between health and environment. It reflects the voices of women working on the front lines and connects the experiences of women working on similar issues in many parts of the world. It focuses on what women are achieving and what has changed as a result. It offers important models for how change happens often in the face of obstacles that seem insurmountable and insights and inspiration grounded in the contributors' successes.

Disability, Gender and the Trajectories of Power
Asha Hans, 2024-09-30. This book explores the gendered experience of disability. It investigates how women with disabilities fare in society, focusing on the experiences of women and their interactions with family, society, and medical and legal institutions. Women with disabilities face unprecedented levels of violence, oppression, and marginalisation in their daily lives, as well as a lack of visibility, proper care, and opportunities for socio-economic development. This book examines the reasons and consequences of the stigmatisation of disabilities and neurodivergence, denial of proper care, and various forms of exclusion and violence women with disabilities face both within and outside of their homes. It brings together the perspectives of academicians and activists that try and understand the various challenges faced by women with disabilities and highlights the fight for their right to autonomy, respect, equality, and justice. Filling the gap in the existing feminist research, this revised edition seeks to influence the way in which society treats women with disabilities and will be of interest to scholars and researchers in the field of women's rights, disability rights, rehabilitation, social policy, and the body.

New Scientist, 1993 Women Studies Abstracts, 2003 India Social Development Report 2023
Indira Hirway, 2024-01-20. This report highlights that gender inequalities and women's subordination in India are caused by two formidable macro structures: patriarchy and the exclusion of unpaid work from the macro economy. Both these structures reinforce each other and negatively impact women's empowerment. Patriarchy imposes subordination on women and forces a disproportionately higher share of unpaid domestic services and unpaid care onto them. This is unfair and unjust, a violation of basic human rights. Other structures like race, religion, and caste cut across these main structures. The selected papers in this report show how patriarchy causes gender inequalities in all critical dimensions of women's life on the one hand and how unpaid domestic services and unpaid care sustain the macro economy and its growth on the other. The contributors discuss pathways to integrate unpaid work with the macro economy such that the strength of patriarchy declines and at the same time gender equality is promoted To put it differently unless the structures are addressed by integrating unpaid work inequalities cannot be addressed effectively The report emphasizes that this is the only way to move to real macroeconomics The papers have explored pathways to break these structures gradually to achieve gender equality and empower women Though the path is challenging it is feasible to reach the goal of pervasive gender equality The World's Women ... ,2010 The World's Women 2010 United Nations. Department of Economic and Social Affairs,2010 The World s Women 2010 uniquely reviews and analyses the current availability of data and assesses progress made in the reporting of national statistics as opposed to internationally prepared estimates relevant to gender concerns Published every five years the World s Women sets out a blueprint for improving the availability of data in the areas of demographics health education work violence against women poverty decision making and human rights Women of China ,2006-07 The Pfizer Journal ,2001
