

fascinating manner is a symbolic emphasis to consume the product. The targeted audience for this advertisement is American females (ispot.tv, 2013).

Analysis

The female model presented in this advertisement is portrayed as an ideal for the female population. The representation of low weight and small size female body is intended to develop an obsession among females, especially adolescent females, to acquire the body similar to that has been portrayed in the television commercial (Hobbs, Broder, Pope, & Rowe, 2006). As the idealization to acquire the body like the female model is developed, the product that the model illuminates is being marketed. This marketing significantly attracts female population to consume the medical product to fulfill the ideal for perfect female body. As the consumption begins, the purpose of product's advertisement fulfills; however, its side effects begin to harm the health and psychology of consuming females. These problems with the health of women are attributed to the idealization of perfect female body to be petite and low-weighted like models in the magazine cover (Wertheim, Paxton, Schutz, & Muir, 1997). The advertisement is the representation of society's idealization of perfect female body which will be briefly discussed in the following heading.

Cultural Biases

As mentioned above, media play the most significant role in the representation of cultural idealizations. However, this paper precisely deals with the idealization of the female body which is illuminated in the selected advertisement. The female model in the advertisement represents the developed ideal for how a female body should be in size and shape in the American society. It shows that the female body is preferred to be low-weighted and small in size (Wertheim, Paxton, Schutz, & Muir, 1997). This appreciation is the primary reason for the female obsession to attain low weight and small size body, in order to be liked in the
