Some Practical Thoughts on Working Across Boundaries Janine L. O'Flynn, 2011 The notion of working across boundaries attracts both practical interest from people in government and theoretical interest from scholars Much emphasis has been placed on notions of inter organisational inter jurisdictional and inter sectoral working and a range of terms have emerged to capture this phenomenon horizontal coordination joined up government collaboration whole of government holistic government collaborative governance and so on However there is a core element to all these terms the notion that we must traverse boundaries to achieve goals Most of the new ideas about public management which have emerged over the last decade or so have put the notion of working across boundaries front and centre Indeed Kelman 2007 has argued that the topics of collaboration across government agencies and between government private and non government organizations are the most discussed questions involving the performance of public institutions and achievement of public purposes p 45 In this paper we provide an overview of the literature on working across boundaries to help answer two key questions First why has this notion emerged Second what are the critical enablers and barriers which help us to understand how this works or not Working Across Boundaries Janine L. O'Flynn, Deborah Ann Blackman, John Halligan, 2011 The notion of working across boundaries continues to receive attention from scholars and practitioners of public policy administration and management In recent times much emphasis has been placed on notions of inter organisational inter jurisdictional and inter sectoral working and a range of terms have emerged to capture this phenomenon horizontal coordination joined up government collaboration whole of government holistic government collaborative governance and so on However there is a core element that binds these various manifestations the notion that we must traverse boundaries to achieve goals Most of the post New Public Management NPM models which have emerged over the last decade or so have put the notion of working across boundaries front and center the New Public Service model articulated by Denhardt and Denhardt 2000 focuses on collaborative structures and shared leadership the New Public Governance model set out by Osborne 2006 includes a notion of inter organisational management inter dependent agents and on going relationships there is a strong relational collaborative thread through the Public Value Management approach articulated by Stoker 2006 and Halligan s 2007 work on Integrated Governance demonstrates that new models of governing place horizontal collaborative boundary spanning ways of operating at their centre Indeed Kelman 2007 has argued that the topics of collaboration across government agencies connect the dots and between government private and non government organisations networks or collaborative governance are the most discussed questions involving the performance of public institutions and achievement of public purposes p 45 In this paper we provide a synoptic overview of the literature on working across boundaries as a means of ordering the field on four key questions First what do we mean by the notion of working across boundaries Second why has this emerged what is the imperative for this phenomenon Third what does working across boundaries involve what are the forms and configurations And finally we identify a series of critical enablers and barriers which help us to understand how this works or not In doing so we seek to open up a discussion on the enduring puzzles and tensions as they relate to working across boundaries
