

Projection Principle

The Projection Principle is a stipulation proposed by Noam Chomsky as part of the Phrase Structure Component of Generative Transformational Grammar. The projection principle is used in the derivation of phrases under the auspices of the Principles and Parameters theory. Under the Projection Principle, the properties of lexical items must be preserved while generating the phrase structure of a sentence. The Principle, as formulated by Chomsky in Knowledge of Language: Its Nature, Origin and Use (1986), states that "lexical structure must be represented categorically at every syntactic level" (Chomsky 1986: 84). Chomsky further defined the projection principle as "representations at each level of syntax (MF, D, S) are projected from the lexicon in that they observe the subcategorization properties of lexical items." For example, the verb strangle, apart from the subject, has an obligatory argument, its object, which must appear in the sentence. The following subcategorization frame for the verb strangle specifies its properties; the underlined gap for the location of the verb is followed by the noun phrase (NP):

strangle Verb. [NP]

It is out of this frame that a sentence like the following can be generated:

Fabio strangled Prince Jamal.

A sentence without the object, in violation of the verb's subcategorization frame and the Projection Principle, would be ill-formed:

Fabio strangled.*

Before the Projection Principle was proposed, phrase structures were generated in separation from the properties of lexical entries. These were hypothesized to enter the slots in pre-generated structures waiting to be filled by the lexical material. According to more recent theories, phrase structures are not generated by phrase structure rules, but are 'projected' from the lexical entries. The Projection Principle therefore obviates the need for phrase structure rules in the generative component.

Extended Projection Principle

The Extended Projection Principle (EPP) is a linguistic hypothesis about the subjects. It was proposed by Noam as an addendum to the Projection principle.²⁶ The basic idea of the EPP is that clauses must contain a NP or DP in the subject position (i.e. in the specifier of TP or IP, or in the specifier of VP in languages in which subjects don't raise to TP/IP such as Welsh).

Most verbs require meaningful subjects—for example, "kick" in "Tom kicked the ball" takes the subject "Tom". However, other verbs do not require (and in fact, do not permit) meaningful subjects—for example, one can say "it rains" but not "the sky rains". The EPP states that regardless of whether the main predicate assigns a meaningful theta role to a subject, a subject must be present syntactically. As a result, verbs which do not assign external theta roles will appear with subjects that are either dummy pronouns (e.g. expletive "it," "there"), or ones which have been moved into subject position from a lower position (e.g. subject of an embedded clause which comes after the verbs like seem, appear etc.).

Examples which have been proposed to be the result of expletive subject insertion in accordance with the EPP:

1. It seemed that John would never calm down.
2. It (rains | snows | hails | etc.) frequently in Quebec.
