Uganda, 1993 Assesses Uganda's urgent social problems: lack of education, poor health, and high population growth, and means for alleviating them. This study concludes that if Uganda's social conditions among the world's worst are to improve, social spending must be both increased and better allocated. Three areas are considered critical: Education. Although the great majority of children enter primary school, by secondary school enrollment drops to only 13 percent overall and to 7 percent for girls. This dropout rate is largely attributed to high fees and poor learning conditions. The study recommends expanding access to primary education by restructuring government expenditure and private spending. Health. Uganda's infant mortality is 70 percent higher than the average among low income countries and its death rate is double the average. Because the leading causes of illness and death are preventable, albeit sometimes with great difficulty, the study recommends that health policy be reoriented toward public health and prevention. Family planning. Given that up to 70 percent of women have a favorable attitude toward family planning, the study recommends that the urgent problem of high fertility be immediately addressed by making family planning services widely available. The report stresses that government policies should take into account the interrelationships among social problems, for example, the correlation of low female education to high fertility, infant mortality, and child malnutrition.

Uganda Jörg Wiegratz, Giuliano Martiniello, Elisa Greco, 2018-11-15 For the last three decades Uganda has been one of the fastest growing economies in Africa. Globally praised as an African success story and heavily backed by international financial institutions, development agencies, and bilateral donors, the country has become an exemplar of economic and political reform for those who espouse a neoliberal model of development. The neoliberal policies and the resulting restructuring of the country have been accompanied by narratives of progress, prosperity, and modernisation, and justified in the name of development. But this self-celebratory narrative, which is critiqued by many in Uganda, masks the disruptive social impact of these reforms and silences the complex and persistent crises resulting from neoliberal transformation. Bringing together a range of leading scholars on the country, this collection represents a timely contribution to the debate around the New Uganda, one which confronts the often-sanitised and largely depoliticised accounts of the Museveni government and its proponents. Harnessing a wealth of empirical materials, the contributors offer a critical, multi-disciplinary analysis of the unprecedented political, socio-economic, cultural, and ecological transformations brought about by neoliberal capitalist restructuring since the 1980s. The result is the most comprehensive collective study to date of a neoliberal market society in contemporary Africa, offering crucial insights for other countries in the Global South.

Crisis, Adjustment and Growth in Uganda Arne Bigsten, Steve Kayizzi-Mugerwa, 1999-06-23 Uganda in the 1970s and early 1980s was one of Africa's more tragic economic stories. Emerging from civil war, it had to embark on reform in the early to mid-1980s from a position of severe political weakness. In the study, the effects of economic policy at the aggregate level are discussed in detail but snapshot empirical analyses of responses at the household level both urban and rural are also presented Uganda was for many years considered to be Africa's worst case its recent recovery thus provides hope for similar countries in the region
