Imagining the Creole City Rien Fertel, 2014-11-17 In the early years of the nineteenth century the burgeoning cultural pride of white Creoles in New Orleans intersected with America's golden age of print to explosive effect Imagining the Creole City reveals the profusion of literary output histories and novels poetry and plays that white Creoles used to imagine themselves as a unified community of writers and readers Rien Fertel argues that Charles Gayarr's English language histories of Louisiana which emphasized the state's dual connection to America and to France provided the foundation of a white Creole print culture predicated on Louisiana's exceptionalism The writings of authors like Grace King Adrien Rouquette and Alfred Mercier consciously fostered an image of Louisiana as a particular social space and of themselves as the true inheritors of its history and culture In turn the forging of this white Creole identity created a close knit community of cosmopolitan Creole elites who reviewed each other's books attended the same salons crusaded against the popular fiction of George Washington Cable and worked together to preserve the French language in local and state governmental institutions Together they reimagined the definition of Creole and used it as a marker of status and power By the end of this group's era of cultural prominence Creole exceptionalism had become a cornerstone in the myth of Louisiana in general and of New Orleans in particular In defining themselves the authors in the white Creole print community also fashioned a literary identity that resonates even today
