Excerpt from Tudor Ideals An early book by the writer on the Italian Renaissance in England had been intended as a partial introduction to a future history of English Sixteenth Century Ideals But a diplomatic career spent mainly in distant parts had interfered with its pursuit and the shadow of a great war has been little conducive to the concentration required for such a study Like those architects who with vast plans in mind rear only a small wing of their edifice the writer has been obliged to restrict his scope and his material till no one is more conscious than he of its fragmentary and imperfect nature In attempting to reduce into words the multiple activities of a nation it is no easy task to weigh their relative importance or to feel convinced that one s individual sense of perspective is either the correct or the only one Historical perceptions are largely personal One searches fixed points from which to measure distances But such measurements at best are incomplete and often other deductions might be drawn from the same range of facts Especially when the search is for ideals rather than for a chronological sequence and the goal is the inner spirit of a nation at a rich moment of its evolution the method utilized which aims to find the expression of ideas in letters and in acts must be haphazard and the result elusive It is easy to discolour history by over blackening its shadows It is as easy to bring out its drabness by reducing all to one dull plane This study is only an incomplete essay which seeks to discover if under the vast maze of facts can be found the rational beginnings of a structure of life in Sixteenth Century England About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Allegorical Quests from Deguileville to Spenser Marco Nievergelt,2012 An examination of sixteenth century quest narratives focussing on their conscious use of a medieval tradition to hold a mirror up to contemporary culture Offers the first full study of the allegorical knightly quest tradition from the Middle Ages to the Renaissance Richly satisfying as impressive in the detail of its scholarship as in the elegance of its critical formulations It seamlessly moves between different literary traditions and across conventional period boundaries In Dr Nievergelt's treatment of this theme the successive retellings of the tale of the knight's quest come to stand as an emblem of shifting values and norms both religious and worldly and of our repeated failures to realise those ideals Dr Alex Davis Department of English University of St Andrews The literary motif of the allegorical knightly quest appears repeatedly in the literature of the late medieval early modern period notably in Spenser but has hitherto been little examined Here in his examination of a number of sixteenth century English allegorical chivalric quest narratives focussing on Spenser's Faerie Queene but including important lesser known works such as Stephen Bateman's Travayled Pylgrime and William Goodyear's Voyage of the Wandering Knight the author argues that the tradition begins with the French writer Guillaume de Deguileville His seminal Plerinage de la vie humaine was composed c 1331 1355 it was widely adapted translated rewritten and printed over the next centuries Dr Nievergelt goes on to demonstrate how this essentially medieval literary form could be adapted to articulate reflections on changing patterns of identity society and religion during the early modern period and how it becomes a vehicle of self exploration and self fashioning during a period of profound cultural crisis Dr Marco Nievergelt is Lecturer Maître Assitant and SNF Swiss National Science Foundation Research Fellow in the English Department at the Université de Lausanne
