

Listen to your child's speech

When did they say their first word?

Most babies say their first word at age one, right after they stand up and start to walk. Children who might be dyslexic often don't say their first word until 15 months.

What age did they start singing the alphabet song?

Most children are very interested in singing the alphabet song at 3-years-old.

When did they learn the sounds of the letters?

Most children after a year of kindergarten can match the letter names to their sounds. And being able to do this must be in place in order to read.

Are they still messing up words after age 6?

Baby talk is cute but they are still saying basghetti for spaghetti and animal for animal after age 6, then this is a clue to a later reading problem.

When did they start saying phrases?

Most babies start speaking in phrases at 18 mos. - 2 years. Children who might be dyslexic often do not speak in phrases until after they turn 2.

What age did they start learning letter names?

By the time they enter kindergarten, most children know the names of most of the uppercase and lowercase letters if they have been exposed to the alphabet.

Are they able to recite nursery rhymes?

Most 3 and 4-year-olds love rhyming and reciting nursery rhymes. An inability to recognize rhyming at this age is an indicator of later dyslexia.

Can they make and recognize rhymes?

If they can't rhyme at age 6, this is a clue to an insensitivity to sounds.
