Time Under Control:

Numerical Methods for Stochastic Control Problems in Continuous Time Harold Kushner, Paul G. Dupuis, 2012-12-06 This book is concerned with numerical methods for stochastic control and optimal stochastic control problems. The random process models of the controlled or uncontrolled stochastic systems are either diffusions or jump diffusions. Stochastic control is a very active area of research and new problem formulations and sometimes surprising applications appear regularly. We have chosen forms of the models which cover the great bulk of the formulations of the continuous time stochastic control problems which have appeared to date. The standard formats are covered but much emphasis is given to the newer and less well known formulations. The controlled process might be either stopped or absorbed on leaving a constraint set or upon first hitting a target set or it might be reflected or projected from the boundary of a constraining set. In some of the more recent applications of the reflecting boundary problem for example the so called heavy traffic approximation problems the directions of reflection are actually discontinuous. In general the control might be representable as a bounded function or it might be of the so called impulsive or singular control types. Both the drift and the variance might be controlled. The cost functions might be any of the standard types: Discounted stopped on first exit from a set, finite time optimal stopping, average cost per unit time over the infinite time interval and so forth.

Recent Advances in Flowering Time Control Christian Jung, Klaus Pillen, Dorothee Staiger, George Coupland, Maria von Korff, 2017-03-10 The onset of flowering is an important step during the lifetime of a flowering plant. During the past two decades there has been enormous progress in our understanding of how internal and external environmental cues control the transition to reproductive growth in plants. Many flowering time regulators have been identified from the model plant Arabidopsis thaliana. Most of them are assembled in regulatory pathways which converge to central integrators which trigger the transition of the vegetative into an inflorescence meristem. For crop cultivation the time of flowering is of utmost importance because it determines yield. Phenotypic variation for this trait is largely controlled by genes which were often modified during domestication or crop improvement. Understanding the genetic basis of flowering time regulation offers new opportunities for selection in plant breeding and for genome editing and genetic modification of crop species. Time Under Control Ivan W. Fitzwater, 1987-06 Imaginations of Time in Lydgate and Hoccleve's Verse Karen Elaine Smyth, 2016-05-13 Using empirical research to explore medieval writers' imaginings of time, this study presents a new morphology by which to study narratives of time in fifteenth-century literary culture, focusing on poems of John Lydgate and Thomas Hoccleve. Karen Smyth begins with an overview of medieval time-keeping devices and considers collective and individual attitudes and perceptions of time. She then examines a range of Middle English authors' appropriations and innovations in relation to such perceptions, identifying competitions of tradition and innovation, allowing for an interrogation of commonly accepted medieval theories of time. An empirically based morphology emerges and is used to examine narratives of time in Lydgate and Hoccleve's work. Through a series of close readings of selected short poems and Lydgate's Troy Book, Fall of Princes, and Siege of Thebes, and of Hoccleve's Regiments of Princes and Series, Karen Smyth looks at expressions of time and examples of the authors' negotiation of time-consciousness, illustrating how both poets manipulate a range of cultural narratives of time in order to create multiple and sometimes competing temporalities within a single poem. Smyth simultaneously draws attention to Lydgate's and Hoccleve's underestimated artistic skills and lays out a means to re-evaluate medieval cultural attitudes towards time. Finite-Spectrum Assignment for Time-Delay Systems Qing-Guo Wang, Tong H. Lee, Kok K. Tan, 1998-09-25 The presence of considerable time delays in many industrial processes is well recognized, and achievable performances of conventional unity feedback control systems are degraded if a process has a relatively large time delay compared to its time constants. In this case, dead-time compensation is necessary in order to enhance the performances. The most popular scheme for such compensation is the Smith Predictor, but it is unsuitable for unstable or lightly damped processes because the compensated closed-loop system always contains the process poles themselves. An alternative scheme for delay elimination from the closed loop is the finite spectrum assignment FSA strategy and it can arbitrarily assign the closed loop spectrum One may note that the Smith Predictor Control can be found in delay systems control books and many process control books but the FSA control is rarely included in these books It is therefore timely and desirable to fill this gap by writing a book which gives a comprehensive treatment of the FSA approach This is useful and worthwhile since the FSA provides not only an alternative way but also certain advantages over the Smith Predictor The book presents the state of the art of the finite spectrum assignment for time delay systems in frequency domain It mainly contains those works carried out recently by the authors in this field Most of them have been published and others are awaiting publication They are assembled together and reorganized in such a way that the presentation is logical smooth and systematic
