Water Quality Management in the Americas Asit K. Biswas,Cecilia Tortajada,Benedito Braga,Diego J. Rodriguez,2006-02-09 Considerable attention has been given during the past few years to the water crisis that many regions of the world may face in the coming decades While the magnitude and the extent of the global water scarcity problems of the future should not be underestimated a serious analysis of the current trends indicate that the main water crisis in the coming years is most likely to stem primarily from water quality deterioration and lack of investment funds rather than from physical water scarcities per se as is widely expected at present In spite of the seriousness of continuing water quality deterioration in most countries of the world water quality management continues to be a somewhat neglected issue in the international water community Even the magnitudes and trends of the water quality problems are not reliably known in many developed countries and in nearly all developing ones Accordingly in order to assess the current situation in water quality management in the Americas and to discuss the alternatives available to improve the existing and future water quality conditions in a cost effective and timely manner the Third World Centre for Water Management in Mexico the National Water Agency in Brazil Agencia Nacional deguas and the Inter American Development Bank organised a workshop on Water Quality Management for the Americas in Fortaleza Brazil 12-13 April 2004

Water Quality Management Asit Biswas,Cecilia Tortajada,Rafael Izquierdo,2014-06-03 The global attention in recent years has focused primarily on water quantity and allocation issues Water quality has received significantly less attention than water quantity Commendable progress has been made by the developed world to control point sources of pollution but commensurate progress in reducing non point sources has not been made In the third world countries both point and non point sources of pollution are becoming increasingly a serious concern Already nearly all water bodies in such countries near and around urban centres have been severely polluted with very high health and environmental costs The book assesses the current status of water quality management in both developed and developing worlds as well as analysing the effectiveness of economic instruments and legal and institutional frameworks to control water contamination It outlines the importance of building up social and political awareness to reverse the trend of continuing water quality deterioration which is likely to be a most challenging task in the coming years This book was published as a special issue of International Journal of Water Resources Development
