The Way of the Eagle Charles J. Biddle, 2016-09-13 A classic aviation memoir an American pilot's account of air combat in the First World War Charles J Biddle a Philadelphia native was active in France beginning in 1917 where he flew as a volunteer initially for the French in Escadrille 73 and then in the American 103rd Aero Squadron the Lafayette Escadrille and then the 13th Aero Squadron and 4th Pursuit Group which he commanded His memoir was published shortly after his return to the United States and provides an immediacy lacking in other books that were written later Accounts of US pilots from this period are relatively rare and this one paints a compelling picture of a group of Americans fighting as volunteers for the French Biddle's US compatriots soon established their own capability and wrung free of French direction and as this book reveals it was largely because of their combat prowess For his service Biddle was awarded the French Legion of Honour the Croix de Guerre the American Distinguished Service Cross and the Belgian Order of Leopold II This memoir gives us a unique perspective on America's participation in the Great War

Biddle, 2015-08-05 Excerpt from The Way of the Eagle In order that any one who may chance to read this book of letters may better understand the detailed descriptions of fights in the air which it contains certain fundamental facts of a more or less technical nature should be at all times kept clearly in mind As every one knows there are many different types of aeroplanes specially adapted to as many different uses Among these there are three distinct classes which cannot be confused without resulting in an almost complete failure to appreciate the tactics of air fighting These three classes are first the small single seater fighting plane known to the French as an avion de chasse to the English as a scout and to the American Air Service as a pursuit machine Next comes the larger type used for the taking of photographs and gathering of information the regulation of artillery fire liaison work with the infantry and the dropping of bombs from high altitudes during the daytime This type usually carries two sometimes three men Finally we have the great multi motored bomber equipped with two three or four engines and carrying a crew of from two to eight men The pursuit plane is the smallest and fastest of all flying machines and has almost always carried but one man Typical of this type are the French Spad and Nieuport the English S E 5 and Sopwith Camel and for the Germans the Albatross the Pfalz and the Fokker
