SPARK ACTION - How To Lead Change

The Future of Work: Leaders Succeed in Disruption

Do you want to become a leader in the future of work? The key is to embrace change and disruption. The future of work is not a distant future; it is here now. The world is changing rapidly, and the only way to succeed is to be ready for what comes next. This guide provides a roadmap for leaders to navigate the future of work and succeed in a world of constant change.

1. Embrace Change: The future of work is full of uncertainty and change. Leaders must embrace change and be willing to adapt to new circumstances. This means being open to new ideas, technologies, and ways of working.

2. Communicate Clearly: Leaders must communicate clearly and consistently. They should set expectations and provide feedback regularly. This helps team members understand their roles and how they contribute to the organization's success.

3. Empower Your Team: Leaders should empower their team by giving them the authority and resources they need to succeed. This means trusting your team and allowing them to take ownership of their work.

4. Listen to Your Team: Leaders should listen to their team and understand their challenges and how to solve them. This means checking in regularly and being open to feedback.

5. Focus Your Team: Leaders should communicate a clear vision and strategy and ensure everyone is aligned and working towards the same goals. This means setting priorities and focusing on what matters most.

6. Be a Coach: Leaders should provide support and guidance to help their team succeed. This means being a coach and helping team members develop their skills and abilities.

7. Be a Connector: Leaders should help their team build relationships and collaborate effectively. This means being a connector and helping team members work together to achieve their goals.

The Future of Training in Psychotherapy and Counselling John Rowan,2014-02-25 The Future of Training in Psychotherapy and Counselling presents a revealing and stimulating account of the current state of training that demonstrates how training will have to adapt if it is to successfully meet the needs and challenges of the future In an attempt to look afresh at the whole question of training John Rowan proposes that there are three ways of doing therapy and any examination of training has to consider each of these the instrumental where the main emphasis is on the treating the client or patient the authentic way where the main emphasis is on meeting the client or patient the transpersonal way where main emphasis is on linking with the client in a more personal way Each approach makes different assumptions about the self about the relationship and about the level of consciousness involved in doing therapy By challenging the basic precepts of traditional training John Rowan encourages the reader to reconsider subjects including the difference between counselling and psychotherapy culture and ethics the origins of disturbance in clients and child development The Future of Training in Psychotherapy and Counselling provides a much needed new perspective that will compel all psychotherapists and counsellors to take a closer look at training in the field
