Susceptibility to Genotoxic Agents in the Human Population Frederick J. De Serres, Ronald W. Pero, William Sheridan, 2012-12-06 As a result of the industrial revolution man's technological achievements have been truly great increasing the quality of life to almost unimagined proportions but all this progress has not been accomplished without equally unimagined health risks Sufficiently diagnostic short term assay procedures have been developed in recent years for us to determine that there are mutagenic agents among thousands of chemicals to which the human population is exposed today These chemicals were not significantly present prior to the industrial revolution As of today there are no procedures available which have been adequately demonstrated to assess individual susceptibility to genotoxic exposures and as a result we have had to rely on extrapolating toxicological data from animal model systems The question is can we afford to allow such an increased environmental selection pressure via mutagenic exposures to occur without expecting adverse long term effects on our health It is apparent from this line of reasoning that what is lacking and immediately needed are test procedures that can be applied to humans to assess genotoxic exposure as well as individual susceptibility to it There have already been two conferences which have focused attention on this research area Guidelines for studies of human populations exposed to mutagenic and reproductive hazards A D Bloom ed March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation White Plains New York 1981 and Indicators of genotoxic exposure in humans Banbury Report 13 B A Bridges B E Butterworth and I B
